NO BASIS YET FOR IRISH PEACE CONFERENCE, STATES LLOYD-GEORGE

De Valera Is Handed Britain's Conditions and Will Go To Dublin To See Colleagues, Returning To London With Sinn Fein's Decision—De Valera Indicates He Is Pleased With Result So Far.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
London, July 21.—The Irish peace negotiations have struck an obstacle. A formal communication was issued at Premier Lloyd-George's official residence this afternoon saying that a basis for a formal Irish peace parley has not yet been found. De Valera will return to Dublin tomorrow and after consultation with his colleagues will return. The official statement said:

"The basis of a formal Irish peace conference has not yet been found. Mr. De Valera has arranged to return to Ireland tomorrow. He will communicate with Premier Lloyd-George again after further discussion with his colleagues."

The communication was issued shortly after Premier Lloyd-George had returned to the Eton house, the English government's peace office. Following the departure of De Valera the premier conferred with General Smuts, the South African premier; Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, and Winston Churchill, secretary of state for the colonies. It was after this meeting that the communication was issued.

De Valera was smiling and cheerful as he returned to his headquarters and indicated that the negotiations were proceeding to his satisfaction. He had refused, however, to make any statement.

London, July 21.—England's peace offer was formally turned over to Eamon De Valera, "president of the Irish Republic today."

De Valera called at 10 Downing street, the premier's official residence, shortly after 11 o'clock. The two went into conference in the cabinet room and almost immediately the premier handed De Valera the peace conditions which had previously been approved by the cabinet and King George.

THE LEVIATHAN HOTEL.
"Joe" Drake Solves Problem Presented by Biggest Liner.

The New York World of today contains the following letter from Joseph Drake, secretary of the Ulster County Society in the city of New York:

To the Editor of The World.
You published yesterday that the shipping board had inspected the Leviathan and was going to take a month to think over what to do with it. I have it. Lease it out as a hotel or apartment house, inasmuch as ships now occupy all the available parking space on the ocean. At the present rates both for hotels and apartments, I am sure the money men will guarantee a good return for the boat.

JOSEPH DRAKE.
New York, July 18.

IN POLICE COURT.

Two Peddlers and One Speeder Face the Judge.
John Fleming, of the Liberty Garage on Washington avenue, was arrested Wednesday evening by Officer Soper on a charge of driving 40 miles an hour through Albany avenue. This morning Judge Schirck imposed a fine of $5, which was paid. Officer Patum this morning arrested two peddlers who were selling without first obtaining a license. W. B. Comstock, a stranger, was handling a wall cleaner. He contributed $3 to the city treasury. Charles F. Young, another stranger, who was handling a foot ointment, contributed $5.

Newburgh's $15,000 Fire.
Fifteen automobiles were burned in a greater or less degree, entailing a loss of about $15,000, in a fire at 1 o'clock Wednesday morning in the former Wood stable at 314 and 316 Broadway, Newburgh. Several firemen were slightly overcome with smoke. Charles Hermann was shocked by electricity, although not seriously affected, and Ernest Sharp, a member of Highland Engine Company, was knocked down and injured by an automobile driver who succeeded in speeding up his car and making good his escape. The buildings are owned by Leonard Hermann and occupied as garages by Andrew J. and Joseph Moser and Wilmut D. Hunter.

At the Sahler Chautauqua.
Mrs. Anne Huntress will speak this evening at 8 o'clock on "How to Push Your Business." It is hoped that many will come and hear this lecture. Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, Miss Jessie A. Fowler, lecturer on phonology of New York city, will speak. Her subject will be on "Phonology." Everyone is invited to attend. Music and singing will be furnished by Miss Nell Beatrice Duff and A. Kaufman.

A Deserted Car.
Word was sent to the sheriff's office at the court house this morning that a Dodge runabout had been left overnight at Sloisburgh, near the ferry, and it was thought that perhaps it had been stolen and abandoned. Sheriff Koltz will investigate.

A Business Certificate.
A certificate has been filed under the business corporation law with the Ulster county clerk by Martin L. Spencer and Charles J. Weiss that they are conducting a business at 299 Fair street under the name and style "Fingston Automotive Co."

SMALL CHARGES POLITICAL PLOT

Governor of Illinois Says His Indictment Was Secured By Attorney General Whose Hands He Kept Out of Public Purse.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Springfield, Illinois, July 21.—Governor Len Small, central figure in the greatest political sensation in Illinois' history, stands today on the position that he, as the state's chief executive, is above jury, warrant or any agency or instrument of the judicial branch of government. It is a situation which might result in calling out state troops.

An opinion, now signed by former Congressman James M. Graham and George Gillespie of Springfield, and expected to be signed before noon by former Governor Joseph W. Eifer of Bloomington, holds that the governor owes it as a duty to the state and the government to hold himself above the authority of the Sangamon county officials.

Governor Small through his lawyers, will communicate, it is believed, that position to Judge E. S. Smith in the next few hours, and ask that the court withhold warrants.

But bench warrants already have issued by Circuit Court Clerk Cohen and are in the hands of Sheriff Henry Mester, despite the fact that Judge Smith yesterday decided that no process should issue on the grand jury indictments until he had heard from the governor.

If Judge Smith, as it likely, overrules the contentions of the governor's lawyers, or if the sheriff proceeds to serve the warrants forthwith, state troops to protect the governor would then be possible.

But the governor's friends hope that it will not be necessary to go to that extreme, they believe that the issue will be settled by means of customary legal procedure.

Governor Small, Lieutenant Governor Fred E. Sterling and Vernon S. Curtis were indicted by the Sangamon county grand jury on charges of embezzlement, conspiracy and confidence game, involving a total of $3,900,000 of state funds.

Governor Small issued a statement in which he declares that Attorney General Brundage, "leader of the conspiracy," has gained the indictment "simply because of the personal fury I aroused in him because I refused to permit him to take from the taxpayers' pockets $1,500,000 for the upkeep of his personal political machine."

Other parties aiming at his political assassination, the governor charged, are the traction interests of Chicago, the public utility interests and certain Chicago newspapers.

The governor said he was not surprised at the Sangamon county grand jury in returning the indictment, as it was the only county in the state where he (Brundage) had any hopes of securing an indictment against him.

He charges that Sangamon county "is dominated by an organization protecting the most vicious criminals and brazen law violators to be found in the state."

The next term of the Sangamon circuit court will be held in September, and unless a change of venue is taken the case likely will be tried here at that time.

EX-KAISER SAYS WOOD.

Another Famous Autocrat Is Among The Missing.
Kingston, N. Y., July 20, 1921.
Editor, The Freeman:

The Government of France, under Louis XIV, has long been considered as the very limit of absolutism. Our own government, before the professional reformer, the blue-law advocate and the other brothers of Dr. Bloom took possession of the reins, was supposed to be "of the people, by the people, for the people."

The historian, Parkman, condemning one of the royal edicts of Louis XIV imposed upon the early Canadian settlers, writes:

"The spirit of absolutism is everywhere apparent. It is of very great consequence," writes the intendant Menes, "that the people should not be left at liberty to speak their minds. Hence public meetings were jealously restricted. Even those held by parishioners under the eye of the cure to estimate the cost of a new church seem to have required a special license from the intendant. * * * Seigneur, consistant and citizen were prostrated alike in flat subjection to the royal will."

It would seem that between 1685 and 1921 Democracy should have advanced more than it apparently has, or is it that we have become children to be taught what to do, what to say, what to drink, etc.?

Mayor Canfield states that his ordinance certifying the freedom of speech in this community was an exact copy of a similar ordinance of the city of Buffalo. Is it not possible that he has also been guided by the edict of Louis XIV?

His Honor should not forget that the Kaiser, the Czar, et al, were great believers in absolutism, and he should also bear in mind that one of them is now sawing wood, and that mail addressed to the other has been returned marked "Not Found." A word to the wise should be sufficient.

Very truly yours,
DISGUSTED 100% AMERICAN.

IDEALISTS MIX AT MAVERICK

But Just Where the Practical Becomes Impractical Isn't Established by First Visit of Rotary Club to Artist Colony.

Prof. Norman A. Boggs, who lectures on metaphysics to the students of Columbia University and in summer gives his personal attention to the support of a farm in the town of Woodstock, addressed the Kingston Woodstockians and their friends at the Maverick Wednesday evening on "Practical Idealism." The paper read by Professor Boggs was most erudite and intricate. Practical idealism and impractical idealism were defined, separated and finally so inextricably mixed and blended that not even Professor Boggs himself could ever separate them again.

Professor Boggs prefaced the reading by a few impromptu remarks on the tolerance of Woodstock, as exemplified by the welcome it extended to artists who paint pictures of blue cows grazing on pink grass. After Frank Messinger's choir had sung the Herpicide song, Harvey White was introduced.

Mr. White said he didn't use Herpicide. Impractical idealism sometimes runs along lines of beauty, he said. There are persons whose emotions are strongly stirred by beauty of color or sound. These people have selected themselves to follow along the lines that please them. Most men accept institutions as they are. There are a few who ask "Why?" They are not trying to be different. They are different. Sometimes these freaks of the world get together in communities as at the Maverick. We are queer and people from Kingston like to come up and see us. You business men are idealists, too. You are in the business you like best. You have to make some money, but you do it in the business you like best. That is, what I do here. I have built up the Maverick to pay my debts by doing the things I like to do.

As to the blue cows grazing on pink meadows—that is the way the artist expressed himself. If you see a picture of a tree and it is like no tree you ever saw, consider that it is the result of serious work by some artist. Buy it and consider it. Study it long enough and perhaps you will see a tree like that in some way. The artist was serious, even if queer.

UNIVERSAL GOODS WIDELY SOLD

The Universal Road Machinery Company of this city have just shipped a large separator weighing over five tons to the Bedford Mining Company of Bedford, N. Y., and also a crushing outfit that is a new departure from the style previously manufactured. The crusher and folding elevator are mounted on a portable frame with the gas engine making it easy to transport and doing away with two separate pieces of machinery, besides the saving on length of belt, and giving increased power.

This is an original design and is consigned to J. H. Chyle of Hales Eddy, N. Y. They have furnished new I beams for the big bridge at Phoenixia as well as for a new bridge at Kerhonkson. The town of Woodstock recently purchased a new Panama grader for road work and a steel tank for their sprinkler. A new elevator was shipped last week to Joseph Walker state road contractor for use on his contract at Chatham, N. Y. Orders for fall are now coming in and the concern looks forward to an exceptional business during the balance of the year.

ONLY 300 DOGS ARE REGISTERED
With but six more days in which to obtain a dog license in Kingston but 300 dogs of the 1,100 dogs have been licensed. The first of the month those dogs who are not licensed will cost the owner $10 each in addition to the license fee. City Clerk Doremus expects to be busy from now until the first of the month issuing licenses.

Our Growing Population.
The following births were recently reported to the health board: Mr. and Mrs. James J. Dale of Tarrytown, a son James at the Benedictine Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Longyear, 74 North Front street, a son Robert Floyd.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Peebles, Saugerties, Route No. 1, a daughter Margaret Grace at Benedictine Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Van Wagoner, 56 Franklin street, a daughter, Florence May.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shapto, Pine Hill, a son George at Kingston City Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Johannes LeFever, New Paltz, a son Perry Deyo, at Kingston City Hospital.

Corporation Election.

James S. Fuller, Inc., at the annual meeting held July 19, at the office of the corporation, 45 Pine Grove avenue, elected the following as directors: Annie K. Fuller, Martha Fuller, Joseph M. Schaeffer. The inspectors of election were James A. Bette and Jesse C. Klein.

LIGHT APPLE CROP IN THIS COUNTY

Less Than Half Normal Condition On July 1—Pears 36 Per Cent Normal, Peaches 74 Per Cent, Grapes 83 Per Cent.

According to the report on the fruit crop in this state prepared jointly by the New York State Horticultural Society and the U. S. Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates, the condition of the apple crop in Ulster county on July 1st was 40 per cent. This means that in the opinion of those reporting, this county will have that percentage of a "normal" crop, a normal crop being defined as the crop which would be expected in a year when weather conditions are favorable and insects and disease cause a minimum of loss. The same report gives the condition of the leading varieties of apples as follows: All fall varieties combined 48 per cent, Baldwins 39 per cent, Greenings 37 per cent, McIntosh 37 per cent, Northern Spy 31 per cent. The condition of the pear crop was reported as 36 per cent, Bartlett's being 39, Seckel 23, Keiffer 22. This report also estimated that the condition of the peach crop of Ulster county was 74 per cent, plums 45 per cent, quinces 56 per cent, sour cherries 17 per cent, sweet cherries 9 per cent and grapes 83 per cent.

In the state as a whole the condition of the various fruit crops was reported as follows: All varieties of apples combined 34 per cent, fall varieties 32 per cent, Baldwins 35 per cent, Greenings 17 per cent, McIntosh 23 per cent, Northern Spy 33 per cent, all varieties of pears combined 48 per cent, Bartlett 42 per cent, Seckel 43 per cent, Keiffer 25 per cent, all varieties of peaches combined 48 per cent, early varieties of peaches 52 per cent and late varieties 42 per cent, plums 27 per cent, quinces 58 per cent, sour cherries 15 per cent, sweet cherries 20 per cent and grapes 46 per cent.

QUOTATIONS AT PUBLIC MARKET

Third Day Of Field Court Market Shows That Market Is Growing In Favor—A Shortage Of Potatoes Reported.

Today—the third day of Kingston's public market on Field Court—proved to be even more successful than the two preceding days with more farmers and a larger number of buyers present. The market today opened at 6:45 o'clock and closed at 9 o'clock.

Commissioner Moyle, who has charge of the market, stated that this morning one producer booked an order for 500 broilers and 3,000 ears of sweet corn, which was the largest single order so far recorded at the market.

Today there was a shortage of potatoes reported, and none were on sale at the market. Friday it is expected that in addition to the usual staple articles there will be peaches, blackberries and plums for sale.

In giving the market quotations Wednesday an error was made in quoting the wholesale price of cucumbers which sold at $4 a hundred instead of 40 cents as stated.

The wholesale market quotations today are:

Cucumbers—$4 per hundred.
Cucumbers, seconds—$2.50 per hundred.
Sweet corn—$2.50 per hundred ears.
Red apples—80 cents per 14 quart basket.
Green apples—65 cents per 14 quart basket.
Cabbage—$8 a hundred head.
Clapp's Favorite pears—$1 per 14 quart basket.
Peaches—75 cents, $1, and $1.25 per 14 quart basket.
Turnips—35 cents a dozen.
Carrots—50 cents a dozen bunches.
Watermelons—65 cents each.
Chickens—broilers—35 cents a pound.

Capital Stock Tax Due.

July 31 is the last day for filing returns for the capital stock tax. To avoid penalty, the returns must be in the hands of collectors of internal revenue on or before midnight of that date. With a view to the prompt collection of the capital stock tax, and for the convenience of the taxpayer as well as the government, the bureau at Albany suggests that corporations submit checks with the returns for the amount of tax due. This method is appealing to corporations as it lessens liability to penalty.

The Game At Ulster Park.

The Ulster Park Baseball team played a 2-2 tie with Esopus Wednesday evening, at Ulster Park. Rube Forsythe, of Fred Whitmore's Regulars of Poughkeepsie, one of the fastest teams in the Hudson Valley, pitched for Esopus. Van Buren of Kingston did the twirling for Ulster Park, while Buck Sears, the famous Kingston High School catcher, was on the receiving end.

Warren Firm's Car Smashed.
The Buick runabout owned by Charles Warren, the Fair street sporting goods man, was wrecked Wednesday afternoon on the Saugerties road just beyond Marz's hotel when the car struck a tree alongside the road. The left front wheel was smashed and the left front part of the car damaged. The car was being driven by Mr. Gibbons, an employee of Mr. Warren.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
London, July 21.—An acute international situation, involving the possibility of a wide open breach between Great Britain and France and the threat of war between Germany and Poland, grew out of the Upper Silesia issue today.

The strain of the Anglo-French relations was emphasized by the vigorous exchange of notes between Paris and London during the past thirty-six hours. France insists that there is danger of a new war conflagration in the east over the Upper Silesian question, but instead of acquiescing to an immediate meeting of the supreme council, France desires to send another allied army into Upper Silesia. Britain is opposing every French proposal.

Paris, July 21.—Contending that war may be brewing between Germany and Poland over Upper Silesia, the Echo de Paris in an article today which had the appearance of being inspired, again brought up the question of military occupation of the Ruhr by France to compel Germany "to accept a pacific solution of the Upper Silesian issue."

France, declared the Echo de Paris, is entitled to take all the precautions she considers necessary to protect her eastern ally, Poland.

In a new note sent by France to London last night, the French reiterated their rejection of the British proposal for an immediate meeting of the supreme council. France contends that the supreme council should not meet before August 15, by which time the allied experts may have finished their work of drawing up the new Silesian frontiers.

In diplomatic circles the opinion is held that France is anxious to put off the supreme council meeting to the last minute because England, in the course of the meeting, probably would demand the evacuation of the Dusseldorf area of the Rhineland by allied forces. The Dusseldorf district was occupied in the spring as a coercive measure to compel Germany to accept the allies' indemnity terms. The French are now demanding, however, that the allied troops be kept in that zone until Germany accepts the allies' Upper Silesian conditions.

France has proposed to England that the allied troops in Upper Silesia be trebled "in the event the Germans attempt to make trouble." England has refused to send any more troops.

According to official figures there are now 8,700 allied soldiers in Upper Silesia, divided as follows:

British, 3,200; Italian, 4,300; French, 1,200.

Another cause for anxiety is contained in reports from Helsinki that Soviet Russia is mobilizing more troops and is maintaining a hostile attitude towards Poland.

Premier Briand's reply to the British note asking for an immediate meeting of the supreme council was transmitted to the foreign office this afternoon by the French ambassador.

M. Briand said that he needed a vacation and cannot attend a meeting of the supreme council before the middle of August. He suggested that experts continue their study of the Silesian question in the meantime.

Marquis Curzon, the foreign secretary, is refusing to accept the French viewpoint. It is understood that he will immediately make a fresh protest to Paris against further delay in summoning the supreme council.

Albany Painters Take Cut.

Albany painters' union at a special meeting in labor headquarters, Wednesday, voted unanimously to accept a one dollar a day reduction in wages according to a member of the union and secretary of the Albany Building Trades Council. The painters with other building tradesmen, went out on strike May first as a protest against a twenty-five per cent wage increase by the master painters of the city. Before the strike the painters received $7.50 a day and will now get $6.50. Three weeks ago the Albany contractors notified the painters to get together with other unions, that if they did not accept the reduction an open shop system would be established. Since then many of the contractors have adopted the open shop policy.

NEGRO SINGERS SCORED SUCCESS

Every year a group of negro singers from the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama visit Kingston and give an excellent program of old plantation melodies, and this year two exceptionally fine concerts were given in the city by the sextette. The first was rendered Tuesday evening in the First Reformed Church and the second Wednesday evening in the Roundout Presbyterian Church. While in this vicinity the sextette will give a concert at Lake Mohonk.

The latest group of singers from the famous school of the late Dr. Booker T. Washington were exceptionally well trained and sang the old "Spirituels" as did their grandfathers in days long past, in deep reverential spirit, with all the native, peculiar richness of tone-coloring and harmonies that make these songs thrill the listener.

One writer speaking of the folk songs of the negro says that there are no more beautiful examples of genuine folk songs anywhere in the world than those which have grown up in the peculiar conditions of the development of singing among our American negroes. The songs of melody and rhythm and the weird harmonies were brought no doubt from Africa, but the application in the needs of expression in religious fervor, unity of effort in labor, in the cotton field or on the levee, are wholly American.

Two poems by Paul Lawrence Dunbar, the negro poet, were recited by one of the members of the party, which were exceptionally good. The entire evening program was one that pleased every music lover. In addition to the old plantation songs the sextette sang Foster's "My Old Kentucky Home" with rich harmonic effect, making it one of the best numbers of the evening.

THE RAILROAD LAW

As It Affects Paving of Streets Carrying Surface Lines.

Editor, The Freeman:

Dear Sir:—In order that the public, both taxpayers and rentpayers of Kingston, may know what they are entitled to and should receive, especially those who own property or live along the lines where the Kingston Consolidated Railroad maintains and operates its cars, would you be so kind as to publish the following, being the amended railroad law, relative to the paving and repair of tracks.

It is a well known fact that up to this time the aforesaid railroad company has had things much its own way in regard to doing its share of street improvements. I believe that after the citizens of Kingston become aware of what their rights really are, and what they can demand from their city officials, after reading the recently amended railroad law that they will be in a position to not only demand that the trolley company makes its share of necessary improvements but that the law be carried out to its fulfillment. The following is the law as amended:

"CHAPTER 433.

"An act to amend the railroad law, in relation to paving and repair of streets.

"Became a law April 30, 1921, with the approval of the governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

"The people of the state of New York, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

"Section 1. Section one hundred and seventy-eight of chapter four hundred and eighty-one of the laws of nineteen hundred and ten, entitled 'An act in relation to railroads constituting chapter forty-nine of the consolidated laws,' as amended by chapter three hundred and sixty-eight of the laws of nineteen hundred and twelve, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"178. Repair of streets; rate of speed; removal of ice and snow. Every street surface railroad corporation, so long as it shall continue to use or maintain any of its tracks in any street, avenue or public place in any city or village, shall have and keep in permanent repair that portion of such street, avenue or public place between its tracks, the rails of its tracks, and two feet in width outside of its tracks, under the supervision of the proper local authorities, and whenever required by them to do so, and in such manner as they may prescribe; but nothing contained in this section shall require any street railroad corporation to make pavements or repairs over openings made in the street by any person, municipality or corporation other than such street railroad corporation, for any purpose other than the removal or replacement of the street. In case of the neglect of any corporation to make pavements or repairs after the expiration of twenty days' notice to do so, the local authorities may make the same at the expense of such corporation, and such authorities may make such reasonable regulations and ordinances as to the rate of speed, mode and use of tracks, and the removal of ice and snow, as the interest and convenience of the public may require. A corporation whose agents or servants wilfully or negligently violate such an ordinance or regulation shall be liable to such city or village for a penalty not exceeding five hundred dollars, to be specified in such ordinance or regulation.

"2. This act shall take effect immediately.

"Thanking you in advance for printing the above, and for past favors, I am, yours for enforcement of the law.

STEAMER STOLEN BY "RED" PIRATES

Story of Senator Schroeder Carries One Back to Days of Spanish Main.

BOLSHEVIX CREW MUTINIED

Put Officers in Irons and Sailed to Murmansk, Then, Tiring of Soviet Life, Stole Vessel Again and Returned to Cuxhaven.

Washington.—The theory that Bolshevik buccaneers, agents or sympathizers were responsible for the disappearance of more than twenty merchant vessels off the Virginia and Carolina coasts during the last six months received a decided impetus when officials investigating the case came into possession of a detailed official account of the seizure of the Cuxhaven fishing steamer, Senator Schroeder, by a mutinous crew, who confiscated the vessel in the name of the soviet government.

After the captain and other officers had been overpowered and locked up, the ringleader of the mutineers, one Kneufken, aided by two Bolshevik agents who had been smuggled aboard as stowaways, ran the ship into the port of Murmansk.

Buccaneer Gets Five Years. Here Kneufken left the ship and eventually made his way back to Hamburg, where he was convicted of mutiny and ship stealing and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Meanwhile, members of the crew who had remained with the Senator Schroeder, tired of life with the soviet and plotted to steal the ship and return to Cuxhaven.

Getting permission to go out on a fishing trip they overpowered their new officers and took the Senator Schroeder back to Cuxhaven, where they were arrested and tried.

This fantastic though apparently indisputable report of mutiny and piracy gave a new lease of life to the belief first expressed by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, that the unusual loss of ships during the last year must be ascribed to the actions of Bolshevik crews.

Official Report of Mutiny.

"The Cuxhaven fishing steamer Senator Schroeder," said the official report in part, "left the fishing harbor in Cuxhaven on April 21, 1921, on a voyage to Iceland. On board were the captain, two officers, two engineers, five sailors, two stokers, and a cook, and also one passenger.

"Three stowaways had been smuggled aboard without the knowledge of the master.

"When the ship was fairly out to sea the captain was deceived into the sailors' quarters and overpowered by the three sailors and the stowaways and locked up.

"The passenger, the first officer, and the first engineer were then likewise imprisoned in the sailors' quarters and the rest of the crew were forced by threats to continue running the ship.

"After a voyage of ten days the vessel arrived in Murmansk on May 1, where Kneufken, one of the sailors, declared it was 'confiscated in the name of the soviet government of Russia.'

HOT ENOUGH TO FRY EGGS

Congressman Langley Proves Statement True as Regards the Capitol Steps.

Washington.—"You win, John," quipped Representative Joseph C. Pingley of Oklahoma, as he mopped his brow and lost a wager to Congressman John W. Langley of Kentucky.

Langley bet that it was hot enough to fry eggs on the steps of the capitol. Pingley said it could not be done.

Langley obtained a pair of eggs from the house restaurant and started his culinary task. The frying was slow but when Langley flipped the eggs over and spoiled a "sunny side up," Pingley admitted he had lost.

Lets Children Marry.

Kansas City, Mo.—M. F. Burch, father of 15 children, appeared before Probate Judge Sims and applied for a license to permit his thirteen-year-old daughter, Goldie, to be married to Jerry M. Hines, twenty-four. This will be the second marriage of young members of the Burch family. A fifteen-year-old son, John, married Carmen E. Elliot, thirteen years of age.

Boy in Pennsylvania Is Older Than Great-Aunt

Belleville, Pa.—George W. Weaver enjoys the distinction of having a great-grandchild who is older than his youngest daughter, and Mr. Weaver himself is only sixty-eight years old. He has been married twice and is the father of 18 children, 13 of whom are living. His oldest granddaughter married Edward Askey. Their eldest son is thirteen and older than Mr. Weaver's youngest daughter by his second marriage, who is great-niece to the lad, who was born before her.

Where He Put Nickle.

NEWEST OF WRAPS

Models in Tricotine, Twill Cord, Normandy and Others.

Heavy Black Satin Reversed With Harding Blue, Affords a Winsome Two-in-One Garment.

It is interesting to note the enthusiasm with which women are greeting the newest wraps. Every week new models are shown in tricotine, twill cord, normandy, bolivia and velours. To cover one's afternoon gown there is a delightfully swagger wrap of heavy black satin reversed with Harding blue satin and heavily fringed at the bottom knee deep. The nicest part is that one may reverse this wrap for evening occasions to the light side, thus making it a sort of two-in-one model.

And the fringe lends graceful effect, swaying gracefully when the wearer is in motion. A big collar caresses the shoulders and is tied in front with long sash ends.

Just the thing for motoring is a brand new wrap of plaid wool, fringed at the bottom and deeply collared and cuffed in plain material. This model wraps itself close about the figure, thus insuring warmth and beauty.

Among the slender coat wraps there is one in tobacco brown, excellent for street wear, developed in loose wrap-like lines, shirred at the waistline, girdled by a narrow belt and touched here and there by silk stitchery.

For dressy occasions is a coat of gray tricotine, in Tuxedo style, with facing extending from neck to hem. For added attraction the revers are scalloped deeply and the turn-back cuffs also follow this example. A narrow string girdle is tied about the hips, giving the low line so fashionable this season.

Black satin and navy tricotine combine effectively in many top coats for daytime occasions, and in almost every one there is a hint of embroidery that lends a subtle charm all its own.

IMPORTANCE OF THE CORSET

Article is Necessary to Aid in Best Appearance of Semi or Wholly Fitting Tailor-Mades.

If you want to look your best in one of the new semi-fitting or wholly fitting tailor-mades you must go back to corsets. There are corsets and corsets, is the comment of a writer.

Carefully selected and cared for the one adds grace and support to your figure, and in novice monies your health, but if you happen to belong to the large body of women who simply go into a corset department, and giving the girl behind the counter the size of the waist, ask for a long or short corset, it is your own fault if your choice hurts you and makes you squirm in its grip.

When you go to buy a pair of corsets be careful not to choose too small a size. The small size brings your curves in the wrong place and flattens your back.

Be careful about the corset's height and length. To get both correct, take the narrow tape which marks the waistline on the inside of almost all corsets, and using it as the starting place, see for yourself how many inches a corset is intended to extend above and below the waistline.

How high it should come depends entirely upon your figure. Remember, if you choose too high a pair it will make the shoulders appear too high, and if the bust be large, apparently increase it.

Unless during the past corsetless year you have lost your proper proportions, choose a pair of corsets with bones only in the back and front.

AN "OFF-THE-FACE" ROLL BRIM

Opal blue taffeta is featured in this winsome "off-the-face" roll-brimmed hat which is meeting with favor among the carefully dressed women.

Transparent Hats.

Transparent hats of crepe georgette, tulle, organdie, hairbrail, lace and the like are irresistibly youthful and often chosen to wear with a dainty, summery frock on account of their becoming softness. Very smart, the crepe organdie leghorn trimmed with sprays of wheat in the same shade.

Self-trimmed.

The self-trimmed dress is having its day. Incrustations, applique flutings are all very good. The latter are simply pressed into shape and allowed to fall loose.

At Anchor in the Bay of Yeddo.

The evening we dropped anchor in the bay of Yeddo the moon was hanging directly over Yokohama. It was a mother-of-pearl moon, and might have been manufactured by any of the delicate artisans in the Hanchodori quarter. It impressed one as being a very good imitation, but nothing more. Nannikawa, the cloisonne-worker at Tokio, could have made a better moon.—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

STILL USE QUILL PEN IN EUROPE

Old British Houses Spurn Modern Writing Implement.

"COMMONS" FIRST TO BREAK

Discards Ancient Quill During World War as First Step in Direction of Economy—Hundreds of Quills Are Still Used Every Day in Westminster Palace—Some Old-Fashioned Business Houses Still Employ Them—Some Historic Pens.

The quill pen still lingers on the stage. The actor playing the part of a statesman, prelate or notary of the eighteenth or seventeenth or earlier century dashes off a message with a goose quill, and instead of laying on a piece of blotting paper he sprinkles it with sand to dry the page by absorbing the wet ink. Sometimes the quill has a place on the shiny, new desk, made in representation of old furniture, and which stands in a lady's chamber. It is only an ornament there, unless the lady likes to show her friends how resolutely she practices the manners and customs of the olden time.

It may be that the quill still sets down words in some old-fashioned or ultraconservative business house in Europe, and it is said that now and then an author, through veneration for the past, or through eccentricity or affection, uses a quill pen. But it would seem that the quill pen's day has passed, observes a writer in the New York Sun.

During the World war word came from London that "After preaching the need of economy to the nation the house of commons made its first start in this direction by substituting steel for quill pens, which have always been associated here with law and lawmaking." It was later written that despite this revolutionary overturn of the quill pen in the house of commons, the palace of Westminster was still a large user of quill pens and that hundreds of them were laid out every day in the writing rooms, and that in some old-fashioned business offices and older fashioned government departments quill pens were still writing.

Penknife Can Fix It.

Not nearly so much has been written about pens as with pens, but a friend of the quill, writing of its virtues and memories associated with it, confessed that the cheap steel pen had nearly ousted the quill from the favor of men, but, he said, "It is significant that members of parliament and journalists who have perhaps never used a quill pen before quickly developed affection for it. Properly used, it is not an extravagant tool to the writer, for it may be mended with a sharp penknife, hence the word 'pen-" knife," and may be used until only the stump remains."

In the olden time, before the coming of the steel pen and when all men who wrote used quills, there was discussion of the relative merits of varieties of feathers. Swan quills were more expensive and "exclusive" than goose quills, and eagle feathers were used by persons of wealth and fashion, and often in the signing of important state papers the eagle-quill pen was used. Queen Elizabeth always used eagle quills.

The word "pen" should remind you of the quill, for "pen" comes from the Latin "penna," a feather, just as "pencil" is derived from the Latin "penicillus," which was a little tail or brush. And this should also be a reminder that the Romans called their black ink blacking, while our word "ink" probably comes through the French from "encrement," which was the red ink used by Roman emperors.

Dickens Quill Sold for $17.

The collector of historic pens is as active and as enthusiastic as collectors of other relics, and some pens used by famous authors have sold for high prices at auction. Dickens used the same quill pen to write "Hard Times," "Little Dorrit" and "Bleak House," and that pen, or what was alleged to be that pen was sold at auction several years ago for $17. The late Empress Eugenie was the owner of the quill pen used by the commissioners in signing the treaty of Paris.

When a state paper which it is believed will become memorable is signed there is always rivalry among pen manufacturers to have one of their pens used. Also it is common for men to offer the use of their gold pen, with the proviso that the pen shall be returned to them. There is always a demand for the pen with which the President signs important bills, and it has often happened that in order to satisfy a number of applicants presidents have used several pens in writing their signature.

Girl Killed Self on Lover's Doorstep.

A love affair of youth ended in Chicago in the death of Marie Carr, twenty years old. Miss Carr followed Harold Handman, twenty-one, home after he left her and swallowed acid on his doorstep after he told her it was impossible for them to become re-engaged.

Boy Read Bible to Get New Bicycle.

After two months of steady reading, Thomas Andrews, twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Andrews of Middletown, N. Y., read the Bible through and received a new bicycle from his father as a reward.

The Amateur's Score.

W. S. Gilbert once received a letter from an amateur composer suggesting that they should collaborate. "My score," wrote the amateur, "will be satisfactory, for, though educated as a chemist, I am a born composer." Gilbert wrote back regretting that he could not comply with the request. "I should have preferred," said he, "a born chemist who had been educated as a musician."

ALL MEN OF TEMPERAMENT

Great Research Specialists, as a Class, Far More Erratic Than Average Litterateurs.

Literary men are supposed to be like women, varium et mutabile semper, and this has turned university dons against them. I once had an argument with a very dignified but not especially literary college official, writes Frederick E. Pierce in the Literary Review. "Ah!" said he. "You literary men are so temperamental." Then he went on to sing the praises of certain great fact research stars on his faculty. I kept my tongue idle and my brain busy. Alas and alas! As if great fact research specialists were never temperamental. As if they never whitened the hair of their deans or blackened the bile of their colleagues. When Walter Scott entertained at his home the half-insane antiquary, Joseph Ritson, was it the urbane poet or the ill-balanced editor of accurate texts who was more temperamental? In the famous quarrel between Furnivall and Swinburne the noted Shakespeare scholar proved himself slightly more erratic than even the most temperamental poet of the Nineteenth century. Everybody knows that Byron got half drunk to write "Don Juan." How many realize that the great university professor Person got one hundred and five one-hundredths drunk before lecturing to that same Byron at Cambridge? Person, with his inexhaustible memory and unquenchable thirst, pouring out hexameters and hiccoughs to his astonished classes—was there ever a more temperamental being?

Human Development.

Humanity, in its acquisition of knowledge, its hopes, its aspirations, its ideals, is in a state of steady development. In art, it is the personal expression of the artist, his individuality—shown not only in mere tricks of style, but in his state of mind, his attitude toward the world about him—which counts most in the end. And that is why art in any form is not a matter only of mere copying of facts. The line to be drawn is not always easy to define, perhaps. But one may best regard some extreme examples. The demand for subject and realism found strong expression in the vogue enjoyed by the chromos years ago. About the same class of people who made the popularity of these color prints at that time today buy the original landscape etching "at $2.37, framed."—"How to Appreciate Prints," by Frank Weltenkamp.

The Raven in Legend.

As he perches on the marble Pallas in Poe's poem with his dolorous reputation of "nevermore" the raven is a "thing of evil." In the legend of the long sleep of Frederick of the Red beard ravens await the time when the emperor shall come to life and appear on the battlefield. It is their intention to fly thrice around the mountain when the proper moment arrives.

Every year a group of negro singers from the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama visit Kingston and give an excellent program of old plantation melodies, and this year two exceptionally fine concerts were given in the city by the sextette. The first was rendered Tuesday evening in the First Reformed Church and the second Wednesday evening in the Rondout Presbyterian Church. While in this vicinity the sextette will give a concert at Lake Mohonk.

The latest group of singers from the famous school of the late Dr.
Booker T. Washington were exceptionally well trained and sang the old "Spirituals" as did their grandfathers in days long past, in deep reverential spirit, with all the native peculiar richness of tone-coloring and harmonies that make these songs thrill the listener.

One writer speaking of the folk songs of the negro says that there are no more beautiful examples of genuine folk songs anywhere in the world than those which have grown up in the peculiar conditions of the development of singing among our American negroes. The roots of melody and rhythm and the weird harmonies were brought no doubt from Africa, but the application in the needs of expression in religious fervor, unity of effort in labor, in the cotton field or on the levee, are wholly American.

Two poems by Paul Lawrence Dunbar, the negro poet, were recited by one of the members of the party, which were exceptionally good. The entire evening program was one that pleased every music lover. In addition to the old plantation songs the sextette sang Foster's "My Old Kentucky Home" with rich harmonic effect, making it one of the best numbers of the evening.

THE RAILROAD LAW

As It Affects Paving of Streets Carrying Surface Lines.

Editor, The Freeman:

Dear Sir:—In order that the public, both taxpayers and rentpayers of Kingston, may know what they are entitled to and should receive, especially those who own property or live along the lines where the Kingston Consolidated Railroad maintains and operates its cars, would you be so considerate as to publish the following, being the amended railroad law, relative to the paving and repair of tracks.

It is a well known fact that up to this time the aforesaid railroad company has had things much its own way in regard to doing its share of street improvements. I believe that after the citizens of Kingston become aware of what their rights really are, and what they can demand from their city officials, after reading the recently amended railroad law that they will be in a position to not only demand that the railway company makes its share of necessary improvements but that the law be carried out to its fulfillment.

The following is the law as amended:

"CHAPTER 433.

"An act to amend the railroad law, in relation to paving and repair of streets.

"Became a law April 30, 1921,
with the approval of the governor.
Passed, three-fifths being present.

"The people of the state of New York: represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

"Section 1. Section one hundred and seventy-eight of chapter four hundred and eighty-one of the laws of nineteen hundred and ten, entitled
"An act in relation to railroads constituting chapter forty-nine of the consolidated laws," as amended by chapter three hundred and sixty-eight of the laws of nineteen hundred and twelve, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"178. Repair of streets: rate of speed: removal of ice and snow.

Every street surface railroad corporation, so long as it shall continue to use or maintain any of its tracks in any street, avenue or public place in any city or village, shall have and keep in permanent repair that portion of such street, avenue or public place between its tracks, the rails, its tracks, and two feet in width outside of its tracks, under the supervision of the proper local authorities, and whenever required by them to do so, and in such manner as they may prescribe; but nothing contained in this section shall require any street railroad corporation to make pavements or repairs over openings made in the street by any person, municipality or corporation other than such street railroad corporation, for any purpose than the pavement or repavement of the street. In case of the neglect of any corporation to make pavements or repairs after the expiration of twenty days' notice to do so, the local authorities may make the same at the expense of such corporation, and such authorities may make such reasonable regulations and ordinances as to the rate of speed, mode and use of tracks, and removal of ice and snow, as the interest and convenience of the public may require. A corporation whose agents or servants wilfully or negligently violate such an ordinance or regulation shall be liable to such city or village for a penalty not exceeding five hundred dollars, to be specified in such ordinance or regulation.

"2. This act shall take effect immediately.

"Thanking you in advance for printing the above, and for past services, I am, yours for enforcement of the law.

Wood Lighter Than Bales.

The wood of a tree found in Panama, Cavanillesia platanifolia, is even lighter than the celebrated balsa wood.
The tree grows to an immense size.
The branches and leaves are at the very top and the trunk is like a huge column. The strength of the trunk is principally in the thick fibrous bark, while the wood is so fragile that it cracks when the tree falls.

Does Have Smallest Flats.

MAKING MORE CRIMINALS.

Many men and women have a sense of honor so high that they refuse to become criminals even though there is personal advantage to be gained and no probability of arrest.

To such people the speech-muzzling ordinance adopted by the common council works a hardship. Undoubtedly there will be public gatherings and assemblies in Kingston for which no permit will be obtained from the mayor; speeches will be made there by men and women who do not apply for a permit to talk. Yet whoever attends such a meeting becomes a criminal.

Unless permits shall have been obtained from the mayor to hold the meeting and also by the person who wishes to make a speech or address, the meeting itself is unlawful. The speech-muzzler specifically says that no person shall participate in any parade, gathering, assemblage or demonstration which has not been authorized by a written permit from the mayor, and furthermore, the violation of any of the provisions of the ordinance is declared to be a misdemeanor.

Officials may wink at violations of the ordinance by failing to insist that a permit be procured from the mayor. But whoever participates in such a meeting and a person participates merely by attendance—becomes a criminal, for crime is divided into two classes, felonies and misdemeanors.

Of course, penalties are provided by another law for officials who fail in their duty, but that law is considered a "dead letter," to be invoked only when somebody desires to get "even" with somebody else.

Nothing breeds Bolshevism and anarchy as quickly as disrespect for law. But disrespect becomes natural when law fails of enforcement or is invoked only for special occasions. If Kingston's speech-muzzler is to be invoked only on special occasions, it becomes a farce and breeds the anarchy it pretends to curb. If it is actually enforced, it becomes infamous tyranny, violating both the letter and spirit of the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of New York, which guarantee to every citizen the right of free speech.

While the constitutional guarantee does not protect sedition, there are Federal and state laws to punish the seditious speaker, neither of which are strengthened by the Kingston common council's free speech muzzle.

The rage for regulation has been slow in reaching Kingston, but the free speech-muzzler makes up in tyrannous outrage what it lacked in speed. If the ordinance is to be enforced only against one class, its present broad provisions are entirely out of place and it compels people not only to despise the ordinance itself but likewise to detect a system which tolerates such practices. But it is the law of the city at least.

Theoretically the law is no respecter of persons. Any other attitude puts executives in the same class as the law-breakers. Bolshevists and anarchists they condemn so strongly and since the Kingston law is drawn in such broad language as to cover every kind of meeting "to which the public are invited or have access," it must be enforced so as to cover every gathering except those to which the public are not invited or do not have access. There can be no hair-splitting where the people's liberties are concerned. The ordinance should be repealed or amended without delay.

TOPICAL SERMONS.

The thoughtful observer sometimes wonders why the so-called popular preachers no longer exalt the cardinal virtues or denounce the deadly sins, but devote themselves to relatively unimportant matters, such as Sunday baseball or a boxing contest. Why do they occupy themselves with these things instead of the serious branches of the moral and spiritual laws referred to in the Ten Commandments? What seems to be the most reasonable explanation is that they think they will be more interesting if they preach "topical sermons" dealing with political subjects, current reforms, or the events of the hour, just as the newspapers do. One of these "topical" preachers of a particularly sensational sort has delivered in New York a sermon on the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, in which he went so far as to say: "The war knocked the props from beneath our moral idealism, and, like a rocket, we have shot down the greased ways toward hell. We are not merely on the to-boggan. We have already landed. We have hit the bottom with a 'thud!'"

In other words, hell is full, not of those guilty of cruelty, fraud, robbery, false witness, adultery and the other heinous crimes, but of those who look at or read about a prize fight, watch a Sunday baseball game or are so depraved as to drink a glass of wine! The old-time preacher who was interested in the Ten Commandments helped many a man to resist the evil inclinations of his heart and keep his feet in the straight path, but can the same be said of the "topical" preachers of our day? No doubt they entertain and amuse the listeners they attract, but are they not convincing doubters that hell is a myth and that religion is a subject for jest?

TWO SAUGERTIES GAMES

For One Admission Sunday, July 24—Good Opponents.

Saugerties has booked two good games at Saugerties Sunday, July 24.

The first game at 2 p. m., will be with the Red Hook Regulars, who have Jones, a Wesleyan College pitcher, Hinman, 2nd base from Wesleyan College and Coughlin, formerly Hartford, Conn. state league, will play center field.

In the second game, at 4 p. m., Saugerties will meet Assemblyman Webb's club of Clinton Corners, N. Y. Assemblyman's club will have McCue pitcher, formerly of the New England league, and Thompson of America, catcher. The rest of the nine consists of the best players of the Harlem Valley, Dickout and Beecher will do the pitching for Saugerties.

There will be one admission for both games.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Pleasing Up-to-Date Model.

Pattern 3499 was employed to make this style. It is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18 year size will require 3 1/2 yards of 44 inch material.

Duvelin, satin, taffeta, serge, poplin, velveteen and all wash fabrics are attractive for this design. As illustrated, embroidered and plain batiste are combined. The width of the skirt at the foot is about 1 1/2 yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or 1c and 2c stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps for our up-to-date spring and summer 1921 catalogue, containing 500 designs of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Patterns, a complete and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various, simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

ABILITY TO HAVE CREDIT BUREAU

Concern, With Backing of Chamber of Commerce, Will Furnish Reports on Individuals and Make Collections—To Point Out What Charge Accounts Mean.

A complete and up-to-date Credit Reporting Bureau, covering Kingston and all the surrounding towns and country, with headquarters at the Chamber of Commerce, is being organized, and is expected to fill a long felt need among the local merchants and is already arousing considerable interest.

The Merchants Credit Co., Inc., of Boston, an organization of specialists in credit reporting work, is to install a system and its representatives are now in town arranging the preliminaries incident to the work. The plan is designed to give the merchants a highly specialized system which is similar to that followed by nearly one hundred cities and towns in New England, and to which the Merchants Credit Co. is adding new features as rapidly as possible.

A complete card index record will be installed in the Chamber of Commerce and will allow the merchants to obtain information direct by phone and bring the credit standing of every individual up to the minute at all times. Their plans include a collection department to supplement the reporting work, which is furnished free of charge to the subscribers, and results in other cities have shown that thousands of dollars have been returned to the merchants, with no cost whatever, which had otherwise been entirely lost, it is said.

The Retail Branch of the Chamber of Commerce have endorsed the system and in the preliminary canvass the active and enthusiastic support of many representative business concerns has been secured.

The Boston company announces that it follows a policy of constructive propaganda, rather than destructive criticism, which is a departure from the general idea of conducting a credit bureau. It will conduct its work on the well established fact that by far the greater percentage of the population of every community is not only honest, but desires to transact business with tradesmen on business principles. The company has demonstrated to its entire satisfaction that when its people learn that in running a charge account at a store they are merely borrowing a portion of the merchant's capital for a stipulated period, just as if they were borrowing money from their bankers, they are generally surprised at first, but the logic of it is so plain that a new conception of their obligations to the firms who extend this courtesy and convenience is nearly always the result.

That the Credit Reporting Bureau will stand with the full support of the best business interests of the town is said to be assured, and that the company installing it will exert itself to the utmost to justify the permanent confidence and support of its members is affirmed by its representatives.

THE TWO DOGS.

"Row-wow," said the little brown and white wire-haired dog to the big police dog, "and what is your name?" He wagged his tail as he spoke and the big police dog wagged his tail as he answered, "Row-wow," he said, my name is Wolf Wolf."

"And mine," said the little brown and white wire-haired dog, "is Michael."

"Glad to meet you Michael," said Wolf Wolf, wagging his tail again.

"I'm glad to meet you too, Wolf Wolf," said Michael.

"I've heard some very fine things of you," said Wolf Wolf. "I've heard your mistress loves to play tennis and that you are wonderful the way you come and watch the tennis game without ever interrupting it. Do tell me about it. I so much want to know."

"Dear me," said Michael, "I don't do anything that is wonderful. Nothing wonderful in the least."

"Oh yes," said Wolf Wolf, "you are very bright and I would like to hear just what it is you do."

"I've been told you're very smart about it, and I'd like to hear just what it is you do."

"It wouldn't sound well for me to tell it," said Michael, "now that you

"There He Comes."

make it out to be fine. As for my opinion of what I do—I don't think it amounts to so much! I don't think I do anything that is wonderful."

"Then tell me what it is you do and I will decide afterward whether I think it is wonderful or not," said Wolf Wolf.

"Well," said Michael, "I walk outside the chalk lines which mark off the tennis court where the people play, and my mistress plays most of the time in the summer. If the balls go outside of the court I go after them and then I wait until I hear some one say, 'I'm serving, Michael,' and then I go and drop the ball at the person's feet."

"The person who is serving is the person who wants the ball, you see. That person must start the ball across the net, you know."

"I don't think there is anything so smart in that. I keep out of the way when I am not wanted though I sit fairly nearby so I can see what is going on and so I can be of use."

"When my mistress is serving she always takes the time to pat me. She says she loves my soft, nice head!"

"That's what my mistress says and as she is a lovely mistress I'm glad she feels that way about me."

"I really don't think it is wonderful to know the little I know about tennis. Why my mistress is wonderful. She knows all about it."

"I think it's pretty smart of you, Michael," said Wolf Wolf, "and I'm not surprised I've heard so much about your cleverness and the way you help at the tennis games."

"Have you seen my master? Well, I'm just as fond of my master as you are of your mistress. I spend my time sitting up and watching him if he's busy."

"The other night I went to a dance with him and sat on the porch and watched him dance. They tell me I'm graceful and they admire my gray and tan hair."

"I am glad they do admire me, because I want to be admired for my master's sake. He is so proud of me."

"And you know, Michael, though I am so big, I'm nothing but a baby! How I adore being patted. Big as I am I will jump up in my master's lap to be loved! I'm a lapful too!"

"I just adore him! I do whatever he tells me to do and when he tells me he is going off for a little while without me I do not follow him but wait until he comes back again. But when he tells me I can follow, what for there is in my dog heart!"

"I am friendly with everyone; but my master I adore! Ah, there Michael, there he comes and with an ice cream cone for me! And I believe there is one for you too, Michael. How I do love ice cream cones. You'd never think it to look at me, would you, Michael? My mouth waters already row-wow!" he ended.

Not on His Hands.

Visitor—What seems to be the trouble, Harry? Why so sad?

Harry—Papa is going to whip me when he comes home.

Visitor—Indeed. What will you give me to take the whipping off your hands?

Harry—He ain't goin' to whip me on my hands.

SHERIFF TAMED TEXAS BAD MAN

"Getter" of Desperadoes When
State Was Wild and Woolly.

NO FEAR IN HIS MAKEUP

A. J. Spradley, for 25 Years Sheriff of Nacogdoches County, Central Figure in Many Exciting Incidents—Days When Men Were Shot Down in Streets Without the Slightest Provocation—Spradley Tells of His Early Experiences.

West Texas in its palmy days of gun play had "a good and plenty" of bad men and a full quota of those fearless and pioneer peace officers pledged to keep these killers down. All this is known and admitted. But he who would get the record straight must not overlook the fact that in the '70s and early '80s east Texas was also a rather wild and woolly region itself, with its own troubles and its own remedies for these troubles, writes Elmer Summers in the Galveston News.

To the easterner of the old days all Texas was the west. To Texans themselves, however, a certain line of demarcation was evident. The country lying between Fort Worth and the border of Louisiana was much more thickly settled and much more "civilized," in a certain meaning of that term, than was that vast stretch of territory reaching out to the New Mexico line and including the Panhandle. Comparatively speaking, of course, the west Texas of those days really was wilder and more primitive than was east Texas. But to the tenderfoot the difference did not present a quite wide enough margin to admit of the making of much distinction. And the tenderfoot's viewpoint is the viewpoint of most all of us living in this day and time. We are all rather effete as compared with the pioneers of the frontier and the tenderfoot's analysis of the situation must stand.

Tamer of Desperadoes.

This, then, is a study of certain goings on in Nacogdoches county, east Texas, a story of some desperadoes and near desperadoes and a story of the man who tamed them.

A. J. (John) Spradley of Nacogdoches, the central figure of this story, was for twenty-five years (intermittently) the sheriff of Nacogdoches county. Born in the year 1855 in Simpson county, Mississippi, he came to Texas at the age of 19. He came alone. His parents, six brothers and three sisters, remained behind in Mississippi for a year or so longer, until they, too, finally followed John Spradley's example and emigrated to Nacogdoches county.

John Spradley meanwhile had gone out to west Texas. There he lived for two years, and perhaps it was in that adventurous atmosphere that he learned some of the lessons that later stood him in such good stead as an enforcer of law and order in Nacogdoches county.

Lively Days in Nacogdoches.

It was in the days of '82 that Spradley first came into the limelight. He was at that time a young farmer living in the country, paying only an occasional visit to Nacogdoches. In those days Nacogdoches was a sort of crossroads between the northern and eastern states and the western portions of Texas and Mexico. That being the case, naturally many desperate characters were attracted to the town, and Nacogdoches had a name, it is said, far and wide for being a town in which "men died with their boots on." At that time there were only fifteen saloons in Nacogdoches county, ten of which were in Nacogdoches. There was much drunkenness, and the officials who took care of the situation had to be brave, fearless men.

In 1882 John Orton, then sheriff of Nacogdoches county, was having great trouble keeping order in Nacogdoches. He employed dozens of assistants or deputies to help him keep order, but to no avail. Men were shot down in the streets on the least provocation. Orton about that time came to know John Spradley, and he asked him to become his deputy. Spradley consented.

Joined Populist Party.

A short time after this Orton resigned his office as sheriff and Spradley took possession of it by appointment. Spradley then held the sheriff's office in Nacogdoches county for ten years. In the '90s the Democrats and Populists were having their contest in Texas. The feeling in Nacogdoches, as in other places, ran very high. John Spradley, Democrat, became a member of the Populist party. He made a race for sheriff on the Populist ticket against his brother, Matt Spradley, who was running on the Democratic ticket. The result of the election which followed was the defeat of A. J. Spradley. Matt Spradley, the brother, held the office one term, and A. J. Spradley ran against him once more on the Populist ticket, getting elected by a handsome vote. He held the sheriff's office until 1900, when a man by the name of W. J. Campbell ran against him, defeating him. Campbell held the office one term, and Spradley defeated him. Then, in 1910, W. C. Rich ran for sheriff against Spradley and defeated him. Spradley regained his seat in the next election. In all Spradley has been sheriff of Nacogdoches about twenty-five years, with intervals, during which time other men served as sheriff, sandwiching his service.

Spradley's Early Experience.

In relating some of his early experiences as a peace officer, Mr. Spradley said: "Many years ago, in the Douglass community, a man by the name of Leony, a merchant out there, was murdered one night while in his store, the man's neck being cut from ear to ear. Every one in the Douglass community thought that the perpetrator of the crime was a negro, and promptly every negro in the entire country about Douglass was put under arrest. I went out to the scene of the killing. After making a close examination of everything, I asked if it were a certain fact that they had all the negroes in the community under arrest. My question was answered in the affirmative. I then ordered them to bring me one negro at a time to a certain place near by—it was dark—and I would proceed to question the suspects. When I was convinced that the questioned party was innocent I would fire a shot from my pistol, take a sheet, place it over the negro after forcing him to lie down, and then call for another negro. This procedure was followed for some time until finally a negro boy was brought out. I showed him the 'dead one' and gave him fair warning. He straightway confessed to having seen another negro pull off a bloody shirt. This was all I wanted. The arrest was soon made and the negro was hanged shortly afterward."

Joel Goodwin Case.

Another very famous case in which Spradley played a dramatic part was the Joel Goodwin case. The following are the circumstances:

"Goodwin," Mr. Spradley said, "was a man with a criminal record living in Logansport, La. At the time he committed the offense, he was the owner of a saloon in Logansport. He had hired as a bartender a man by the name of Collins. Later, Collins decided to put up a saloon of his own. Goodwin warned him if he did he would kill him. Collins, notwithstanding, put up his saloon, and Goodwin, as he said he would do, promptly shot Collins to death. Goodwin made good his 'escape' from Logansport to the country and no one could find him. I had then, as I have now, a fine bunch of bloodhounds, and I decided to try my hand at catching him. I was not then an official. I went with my dogs to Logansport, but on account of many things it looked as if I would fail with them. I finally asked for some of Goodwin's underwear. This was given to me. I took the underwear out to the woods where Goodwin was supposed to be hiding, and let my dogs get the scent from the clothes. After they did this they lost no time in getting on the trail of the offender. They gave the man such hot chase that he finally came back to town and gave himself up. He stood trial and came clear."

"But the man was angry at me. He declared that I had done him wrong; that some day he was going to kill me. A few months afterward, when I was sheriff, I was called to Louisiana to investigate a postoffice robbery. Goodwin, who was still living in Logansport, heard that I had passed through there in the direction of Shreveport, and he declared he would kill me on the train upon my return. I was notified of the plans by wire. Goodwin was at the depot to meet the train that was bearing me homeward on my return trip. He had his wife and two sons with him.

Mail Clerk Shot.

"They were heavily armed with rifles and shotguns. When the train pulled up at the station Goodwin mistook the mail clerk for me and fired a full charge of buckshot into the shoulder of the poor fellow. I then came to the window of the car in which I was riding and peered out. Goodwin saw me and leveled his gun. I was too quick for him, however. I fired and Goodwin fell dead with a bullet in his forehead. His wife made a desperate lunge at me, attempting to shoot me with her revolver. She stumbled and fell and about that time the train started out of the station, carrying me away from the mob. Nothing was ever done with me for this shooting, the district attorney of that county afterward saying that he 'would if he could raise $1,000 for me.' Goodwin was a man every one feared."

Such stories as the preceding are only two of the many that Mr. Spradley can tell to an interested listener. But a man of Mr. Spradley's type cannot long travel the road he traveled without mishap or misfortune. He has had some narrow escapes, having been seriously shot several times by desperate men.

SOVIET BANS FAIRY STORIES

King and Princes Must Be Described as "Oppressors of Masses."

All religious or mythological subjects are banned from a competition for the best short story written for Russian children which has been organized by the Moscow soviet commissariat for education, says a dispatch. Additional conditions for competitors as published by the soviet newspapers are that the children's tales must be devoid of all elements of superstition, and must contain no mention of angels, fairies and evil genies. Kings and princes must be described as oppressors of the masses, "such as they are in reality."

As suitable subjects are suggested the future of mankind, the achievements of science, technical skill and industry, while tales describing the life of the working masses will be especially welcome.

Simple Wet Battery.

Perhaps the most simple wet cell which can be made, says Experimental Science (Washington), is from a copper wire previously heated in a blue gas flame, and a silver wire, both held in running tap water. The copper wire in the gas flame becomes coated with a film of copper oxide.

A varied effect can be produced by separating the copper and silver wires by blotting paper and wrapping them with the same material, and then pouring one of the common electrolytes upon the whole.

Salt ammoniac or sulphuric acid can be used.

India Rubber the Earlier Name.

India rubber is an earlier name for rubber, but now little used. Soon after the discovery of America (then called India), Europeans heard of the use of this substance. They called it elastic gum until they discovered that lead pencil marks could be erased with it, when they began to call it India rubber.

Improved Fire Hose Coupling.

Couplings for fire hose that are tightly locked by a quarter turn have been invented by a Massachusetts man.

PANHANDLER IS NIPPED BY VICTIM

Champion of Park Row, New York, Whither the Best Flock,
Is Forced to Yield.

HE HAD A STORY THAT WON

New Londoner, His Pocket Picked,
Wanted Only Dollar to Get to Rich Relatives in Perth Amboy, and Got It.

New York.—There recently landed right out in the middle of Park row a well-dressed, smooth-talking person who, in a few short weeks, has done a creditable job in making that thoroughfare live up to its other name—Panhandlers' Range. The first time he was sighted by the only victim to whom he is known to have repaid a "touch" he was sprinting west in Chambers street. A few hundred feet away, he was noticed searching wildly through his pockets and registering simultaneously impatience, embarrassment and chagrin.

"What do you think about that?" he appealed to the victim as he rushed and halted. "Some pocket-picking cuss has grabbed my roll."

"You might have lost it," the victim suggested.

The well-dressed man was relieved—vastly relieved. "Glad you mentioned that," he observed, blocking the other's progress east. "Gives me the creeps to think some guy had his hand in my pocket. At that I'm careless—very careless. If I had less money I might be more careful."

At that the victim, not knowing he was about to be bled and thinking himself slightly outclassed financially, started on his way, only to be recalled by the stranger.

Tale That Brings Coin.

"Are you from New Jersey?" asked the man. "I ask," he went on hurriedly at the other's negative shake of the head, "because I'm well known over there. Well-to-do family and all that sort of thing—uncle way up in Democratic politics over in Jersey City—another one down at Perth Amboy. My name's Doeley, and if you had known anyone over in Jersey I was going to ask you to lend me a dollar until I could get some money."

The victim's hand slid toward his pocket. "I haven't," he began.

"That's all right, old man," said Doeley—that isn't quite his right name, by the way—"don't let my troubles worry you. As a matter of fact I won't need a whole dollar. I only need one way fare to Perth Amboy. I'll be coming right back through New York to go to my own home in New London, and—"

Something in the victim's expression told him that he had named a locality that was familiar. "You know people in New London?" he asked.

"A few."

"Do you know—?" he began, mentioning the name of a friend of the victim. And upon being told the name was familiar, he ran through a list of New Londoners that was almost a complete directory of one part of the town. "Isn't it fortunate that I've met a fellow who knows people I know," Doeley continued affably, and he laid his hand on the victim's shoulder. He proceeded to enumerate the eccentricities of one of the victim's New London friends and raking his memory again, spoke of the trick automobile another used to own.

Doeley Lands His Dollar.

The connection was made and Doeley played for his dollar. Eventually he got it.

"I'll be through New York in exactly three hours," he called over his shoulder as he sped toward the West side ferries. "I'll look you up and we can go to supper together before I run for the Federal Express. You all-night workers are a bunch of good old scouts. S'long."

It wasn't until eleven o'clock that night, an hour after Doeley said he would appear on deck with a roll that the victim, one of the night workers who knew better than to believe everything he hears up and down Park Row, looked down on Broadway and confided to a friend that he was waiting for a man from New London, a well-dressed lad with the gift of gab who had had his pocket picked while spending a day in woolly New York.

"Saw-ay," said the friend, "this New London bird wasn't on his way to Perth Amboy to get some jack from a wealthy uncle, was he?"

The victim, then just beginning to surmise the worst, nodded. For the next three days he continued to hear the stories of other victims who "fell" for the story of the stolen roll and the high family ties and Perth Amboy and everything.

In the stories of ordinary panhandlers "suckers" there would be nothing further to remark. In this one, however, there was a sequel.

It was four o'clock on a Sunday morning and the victim mentioned in Part I and another night working pal were sitting in one of the most luxurious armchairs that could be found in several years' inspection. They had just completed a general free-for-all discussion of the ability of various panhandlers when the door was thrust violently open by two men. The newcomers proceeded to the counter, one invited the other to order anything he wanted.

"Have a couple of ham-and-sandwiches, Mr. Doeley," he urged. "They'll do you good and you'll need them to hold you over until you reach New London."

That Well-Remembered Voice.

"Perth Amboy," the other corrected. "New London later on."

The victim turned slowly. He wasn't mistaken. He couldn't forget that face nor the thick-rimmed spectacles perched on the—now that he noticed it—rather pre-Volsteadian nose. His inclination was to do something that would measure up to the statute that covers felonies, but waited until Doeley and his latest "sucker" were well on their way to the end of the meal. Then he walked over, his pal bringing up a strong rear.

"Hello Doeley," he said in greeting. "How about that buck?"

"You've certainly got the advantage of me," Doeley answered in a voice that had its root in the Social Register. "You certainly have. I guess I've got a standard face."

"No you haven't," the ham-and-eater was told. "As a matter of fact you have a rather successful face."

Doeley stood on his dignity until a bit of paper upon which he had written his name and an address and telephone number in New London, were produced. Then his eyes popped out at least three-quarters of an inch. Either one of them would have served to hold a hat or a coat.

"Sure enough," he laughed. "You're the fellow who was kind enough to let me have a dollar the other night."

"Yes," said the victim, "and you were going to stop in with it on your way back to New London."

"Right. And I haven't got started back yet. Had some business to attend to—shipping board stuff—owe me a lot of money—you understand."

The victim nodded. "I understand," he agreed.

A Fast and Agile Talker.

"And I've mislaid your address. Can't find it anywhere. Left it in one of my other suits, I guess."

Again the victim nodded. He understood. "But you can slip it to me now," he suggested. "You must have been down to see your—was it your uncle?"

Doeley was breathing jerkily by that time, but he was able to explain that he had let his wallet tumble out of his pocket while riding across the Brooklyn bridge.

"Yes, he was riding across the bridge," his "sucker" interposed. "And I've promised to let him have enough to get to Perth Amboy."

In the ten minutes that followed the first victim informed the new stranger that Doeley had already lost his pocketbook or had his pockets picked nine times at least within ten days.

"I don't care," said the new one. "I've promised to give him $2 and as a matter of principle I'm going to keep the promise. I'm going to hand him two dollar bills right now and beat it back to Paterson, and if you want to hit him over the dome with a mustard pot or something and take one of them, it's no concern of mine."

Doeley got the two dollars and surrendered one to the victim who had found him out.

"Take it," he said, "and we'll be good friends."

As the successful victim and his pal walked out of the restaurant, the pal turned.

"You certainly went to a million dollars' worth of trouble for one berry, old top," he observed. "Any one'd think you borrowed it too."

"Lay off," said the victim. "I did."

WHITE HOUSE SILVER TAKEN

Many Valuable Pieces Are Missing After Each Tea in the Executive Mansion.

Washington.—People who attend White House teas are above any such thing, of course, but—

The fact remains that many pieces of White House silver have vanished after each tea. The silver is engraved with the words, "The President's House," and bears an especially attractive pattern.

Its disappearance has created a serious, not to say delicate, situation for President and Mrs. Harding. Thus far they have discovered no way out of the dilemma.

It would be improper, of course, to have secret service men search the departing guests.

Warned of "Puncture Vine."

Washington.—Motorists, beware the tribulus terrestris! Government weed sharps issued a warning against the "puncture vine" of the West and Southwest, an undesirable immigrant from southern Europe which probably stowed away in the fleece of sheep to reach this country. A California man, the report said, reported 70 punctures in one tire, committed by tribulus terrestris.

Finds Tooth of Fish That Was Big as Steamer

Los Angeles, Cal.—A tooth of some prehistoric fish, so large as to indicate its owner's size was nearly that of an ocean liner, has been found among other fossils in the lime pits at Terrance, near here.

About one-third of the tooth is missing. The portion found weighs nearly two pounds, is five inches long, four inches across the base and almost two inches thick.

Many bones of prehistoric animals are daily being taken from the pits.

Lived Months on Desert Island.

The ship Riddersholm was lost off Hamblin island, Patagonia. Her crew put off in three boats, one of which foundered in the high seas, and one was ultimately picked up. The third was given up as lost. In her had been the skipper, and accordingly his insurance company paid the amount of his policy to his widow. Ten months later the skipper came along, hale and hearty. He, with his boat's crew, had been cast on Hamblin island. They had built a hut, contrived to get a fire, and had lived on the sea-birds, seals, and wild roots till a passing ship, noticing signs of human life on the island, had sent her boat ashore and taken off the castaways.

If you will be stirred, riveted to your seat, as thousands of others have, who were fortunate enough to see acclaimed as the most thrilling, most dramatic, most unique theme ever developed. The character, "Heliotrope Harry," is beyond the peradventure of a doubt the most astounding ever conceived by writer, novelist or playwright. A convict, 'tis true, but the sacrifice he makes for love of his daughter, who does not even know of his existence, proves that under the garb of shame beats a heart as noble as ever possessed by heroes of song and story.

I am sure that every one in Kingston who attends Keeney's Thursday will be a living endorsement of the finest photoplay ever known.

Cheerful Meals.

Air, light and sunshine are bestowers of health and cheerfulness. For this reason an effort should be made always to have meals in the brightest room, even if it means having breakfast at the back of the house and dinner at the front. It usually can be managed if the housewife will. Meals taken with an open window also make for health; a shut door should obviate draughts, and the open window lets in blessed air and light, hand in hand with happiness.

Information Cheerfully Given.

A few years ago in a college examination in English literature the question was asked: "Who was the first man to write sonnets in England?" A student who sat near me, more noted for athletic prowess than for scholarship, called to me in a stage whisper: "Ssssst! Who was the first man?" The professor in the front of the room gave us both a cold, unmerciful glare and calmly said: "Adam!"—Chicago Journal.

World's Supply of Indigo.

Indigo, which is obtainable from plants of several species, is probably the oldest dye known to mankind. At the present time the bulk of the world's supply of indigo is obtained chemically from anthracene. The importance of natural indigo is rapidly diminishing. About the only regions where indigo farming still prevails are a commercial scale are Bengal, in India, and Salvador, in Central America.

How Time Scoots!

Are you thirty-four years old? If so, you were a year old when the first electric street car set everybody wondering. Now, look at 'em!

An empty wagon's rattle is heard farther than a full one.

Spooning O. K. in K. C.

Kansas City, Mo., May 19.—Outdoor spooning was officially recognized as a legitimate summer sport today by Chief of Police Edwards. He said police will let love alone. Associated Press Dispatch.

We are getting back to normalcy.

Owing to shortness of ladies' dresses fewer women have been victims of street accidents during the past year than formerly. And in the same period the number of accidents to men has increased. The men have been rendered absent-minded by the street scenes, apparently.

"I don't like these photographs at all," he said. "I look like an ape."

The photographer favoured him with a glance of lofty disdain. "You should have thought of that before you had them taken," was his reply.

A plumber at Pierce City (Mo.) has a sign reading—"I am in a dirty business but I do clean work."

A Little Surprise.

An Ulster county farmer wore his old suit until everybody was tired of it and his estimable wife was ashamed of him. But one day when selling produce in Kingston he determined to buy a new suit, and a happy thought struck him. He would surprise Eliza. So he bundled a new suit into the wagon and hurried toward home and at the bridge he stood up in the wagon and "peeled off" the despised old suit and threw it into the river. Then he reached for his new clothes.

They were gone—had jolted out of the wagon.

The night was dark and cold, and his teeth chattered as he scurried home.

And he sure did surprise Eliza.

Exception is taken by a Missouri editor to that clause in life insurance policies which reads: "Do you drink liquor, and if so, to what extent?" He thinks it is irrelevant and impudent. Nobody drinks liquor now. One may imbibe 'hootch', but the liquor of other days is practically exhausted.

After an absence of four years a certain man came back to his old home town. The first four people he met didn't remember him and the next three didn't know he had been away.

"It," says a press agent—referring to what might be a four column story, but most likely won't—"is not a publicity story, but a frank, straight-forward statement of facts and figures." Emphasis on the word frank.

"Did you ever," he goes on to ask, "consider the vast number of people the motion picture reaches?" No, he haven't, but judging by the number of m. p. press agents who keep the janitorial staff busy dumping waste baskets there must be quite a goodly number.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. What do you know about sweet knots? I have found aromatic knots on pin and white oaks.

2. When do deer shed their antlers, and how soon do they grow again?

3. Is the wing action of the swift understood? I believe it to be alternate and rotary, is not the flight of the humming-bird, a relative of the swift, also alternate?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Are gold fishes any practical use?

Certainly. The common gold fish (and silver fish, too) eat mosquito larvae and is valuable in keeping down these troublesome wrigglers in ponds or aquaria. As mosquitoes breed enormously in any standing water, the fish makes a good scavenger and preventive agent.

2. Why should there be any twist in the hair of a cow's tail?

This is probably related to the reason for any hair's curling, said to be a slight malformation of the cells that compose the hair. In straight hair an approximately perfect cylinder is formed but in curly hair, as cells form at the base and are pushed forward, they are a trifle misshapen and form a tube that wavers instead of building up straight. What causes this peculiarity of the cell formation on some individuals or species, nobody can say.

3. How many broods of young do robins have yearly?

Robins usually have at least two broods and not infrequently attempt a third brood in August, particularly if the parents have not been disturbed in earlier attempts at bringing up a family.

COFFEE

Iced coffee—the thirst-quenching, drink.

There's no beverage like iced coffee for luncheon or dinner—indoors or out-of-doors. And it tastes just as good with the ice clinking in it, freshly drawn or poured from a thermos bottle.

Reliance Coffee, served ice cold, has that same distinctive taste which is so much appreciated in hot coffee—taste that makes the drinker call for another serving.

For Reliance Coffee tastes just as good as it smells—either hot or cold. There's no aroma quite so closely linked up with taste as coffee aroma and in Reliance it reaches perfection.

Order a pound of Reliance of your grocer today. Sold only in sealed oval canisters. You'll enjoy the coffee that tastes as good as it smells. Wm. T. Reynolds & Co., Inc., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Incendiary fires, which destroyed a dozen buildings of the Western Penitentiary, were accompanied by rioting by nearly all of the prisoners. Fourteen persons were injured in what at one time promised to be the greatest wholesale jail delivery the country has ever known. Only the alertness of the guards in refusing to be tricked by a ruse, prevented the convicts' plot from being successful. For more than two hours guards and police battled with the convicts. So far as known not a convict escaped. For several weeks trouble had been brewing between the Pittsburgh Penitentiary convicts and a batch of convicts brought from the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia. The photo shows firemen fighting the flames near the mess hall.

MEETING OF EAST AND WEST

Peculiar Circumstances Under Which American Physician Treated Inmate of Penitentiary.

One day a great-aunt of the shah sent a note to the dispensary, asking me to visit her daughter, who was ill, writes Mary W. Griscom, in Asia Magazine. Her messenger conducted my Armenian nurse, who acted as interpreter, and me through the garden, with its fruit trees and decorative shrubs and marble pool, into the women's quarter. A servant ceremoniously arranged two green velvet armchairs in the exact center of the room for the mother and me.

Soon all the women of the household gathered around us, for a visit from a foreign woman doctor was a most entertaining diversion in the monotonous domestic routine. The patient entered dramatically at the proper moment and sank into a luxurious pile of brocade cushions beside the korsi (table), which was covered with white velvet stenciled in black. A samovar of hot water was carried in, and two servants brought a silver basin and poured out the water from a slender silver urn for me to wash my hands. Then the patient lay down on the korsi that I might examine her, and all her attendants crowded around her and excitedly vociferously urged her to be brave and not to worry, until such a pandemonium was raised that I could not hear the interpreter or my own voice.

When they quieted down and I found it possible to proceed with the examination I continued it. I was offered the silver basin again, and served with tea and sweet cakes, while I discussed the case. I decided that an operation was necessary.

A few days later an operating table was brought into the house. In a large reception room, the floor of which was covered with the most beautiful rugs I had ever seen, the operation was performed. The doctor, who had arranged for me to visit the Persian lady, was asked whether I would rather have a fee or a carpet, and it was decided that I would prefer a carpet. A few days later when I called on the patient, she told me that she had sent her agent to the bazaar to buy me a carpet, and he had returned with word that there was no carpet in all the bazaar honorable enough for the lady doctor. So she invited me to select from her palace any rug that pleased me. My protestations were futile. I had to wander through the great rooms, followed by a procession composed of the ladies of the household, the attendants and servants, and find an honorable carpet. I examined them all and selected a lovely Kurdistan rug with an old-rose background and green border. This was promptly rolled up by the servant and carried to the patient, who said that I must have been accustomed to fine carpets all my life, for I had chosen the rarest rug in her possession. I was much embarrassed and tried to refuse the too princely gift, but she insisted that I must have it—and I carried on to America my most exquisite memory of Persia.

TIPPING CUSTOMS IN MANY LANDS

Courtesy in One Place. Forced Assessment in Another.

PERCENTAGE SYSTEM USUAL

A Virtue on One Side of a Political Boundary May Be a Crime on the Other—in Early Days of Revolution It Was Almost Impossible to Give a Tip in Russia—Tipping in the East Seldom Causes Embarrassment or Hard Feelings.

"The tip has its geography no less than the coin with which it is paid. Extending it may be a graceful courtesy in one part of the world and a matter of a forced assessment in another; a virtue on one side of a political boundary and a crime on the other," according to a bulletin on the tipping customs in various countries issued by the National Geographic society.

"In 1917, a few weeks after the long-awaited Russian revolution had started," the bulletin continues, "American travelers in Petrograd cheerfully paid a percentage of their bills for service and were spared the necessity of buying their hats several times over as modern man does if he frequents some restaurants in America. It was almost impossible to give tips in Russia then. One man was questioned regarding the matter and his reply was that if he took a tip, he could not call the giver 'tovarische'—he could not exact a gratuity from a 'comrade.' During eleven months in Russia, the tipping bill of one traveler would not have satisfied a metropolitan bellboy for showing a guest to a 'free' checkroom.

"Last summer, in Prague, a charge of 20 per cent for service was added to hotel bills. This high rate was due to the fact that the price of rooms was strictly regulated but the price of wages was not. In Carlsbad, now called, but little known as Karlovy Vary, at one of the best restaurants the Czechoslovakian waiters also refused to accept tips. The 15 per cent added to the bill satisfied them, and they seemed glad to be able to look one in the eye instead of in the palm. The 15 per cent was as much a part of the bill as a cover charge or the cost of bread and butter, and could be counted on in advance.

"In West China a few years ago, chair coolies, after many days of hard toil, were delighted to receive a little present to be used in providing a pork feast. Throughout remote regions of the world, the gratitude that is evoked by a small present graciously given is very charming to one whose pocketbook is the subject of siege every time he makes a move in civilized zones.

Tipping One's Way in Trieste.
"Last summer a traveler arrived at Trieste at midnight to find the city in darkness and without trams because of a strike in the electrical plant. Another strike had wiped the carriages and taxicabs off the streets. For a tip, the custodian of the baggage room opened his storage chamber, for another tip a porter carried the checked baggage from the train. The only consolation left to the midnight arrival was that the money was cheap.

"At 2:30 a. m. the traveler was in bed and out a fifty lire tip although the price of the room was only 15 lire a day. A week later this traveler was in the prize hostelry of Venice blessing the Italian race and the founders of the city because the porter at the desk allowed him to pay for a room without forcing him to pay for the privilege.

"Throughout the East, tipping is so general and so moderate in the scale of donations that it seldom causes embarrassment or hard feelings. But the outgoing guest sees more servants than the incoming traveler dreams of. Speeding the departing guest is Asia's one hot bet. The most satisfactory plan for the traveler is to hire a bearer, tell him in advance how much he will allow for tips and then let the tactful employee gamble his desire for gold against his willingness to have his ancestry cursed unto the dawn of time.

Where Hotel Rooms are Scarce.
"In Central Europe, a hotel room is a prize to be won by painstaking effort. In Bucharest one may have to visit so many hotels that his carriage bill will make other expenses seem impossible. After such a fruitless search for quarters a traveler recently obtained a letter from a cabinet minister to the chief of police. After that worthy had risen from his noon-day nap, he sent a police sergeant with the searcher demanding in the name of the law that he be given a room. A porter then consented to do what he had refused to do two hours earlier.

"One sometimes has pleasant memories of gratuities given. A tourist fresh from college, was 'doing' Europe cheaply some years ago. In Liverpool, he sought a modest hotel and was given a very satisfactory room in the morning he was so impressed with the way the maid looked out for his every want and with her general eagerness to please that he tipped her a shilling.

"You will pardon my saying so," she said on receiving it, "but in moderate priced hotels like this one, a threepenny bit to the maid would be quite enough."

Hupmobile

Our honest conviction is that no other car in the Hupmobile class presents so many of the good mechanical points which are usually confined to cars selling for much more.

To begin with, the Hupmobile is manufactured in Hupmobile plants, by skilled Hupmobile workmen.

Motor, clutch, transmission, axles are Hupmobile products—with no limit placed on the quality of materials or workmanship by some outside manufacturer.

That means that Hupmobile engineering and production facilities, and the will and intent to give the buyer all he pays for, have full sweep.

More than anything else, perhaps, that accounts for the greater economy, the longer life, and the higher re-sale value which make the Hupmobile worth what it costs.

Open Evenings.

Frank Farino, 16-year-old boy, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is in Holy Family Hospital, where three stitches were taken in his heart to close a wound following an accident, when a knife he was sharpening slipped and punctured his heart. Surgeons of the hospital staff sewed the heart, after having taken away sections of two ribs to make a clear way to the heart. The boy is reported resting comfortably, and there is good hope of his recovery, although blood transfusion may be necessary. The diagram shows how the heart was stitched.

Along the river, too, dwell other birds that give it a peculiar quality of its own, even from the merely pictorial side. The great blue heron is a familiar resident of our streams. You never see him in the orchard or the wood. But as you slip noiselessly down the current in a canoe you may round a bend where the willows dip the stream or the white birchen gaze at their white reflections, and come upon him wading on a sandbar, his long neck alternately shortening and lengthening as he preens his feathers, his beautiful blue plumage over the rippling water, and his graceful form, making a picture as Japanese as anything in Japan.—Walter Prichard Eaton.

Poisonous Flowers.

The poppy is a common flower whose odor has evil properties. Doubtless this is due to the amount of opium which the blossom contains. Numbers of individuals, especially young ladies of highly strung temperament, complain of a drowsy sensation after walking through a field of these flowers. Violent headaches follow. In Asia Minor, where poppies are grown in vast quantities, tourists frequently are incapacitated for many hours after inspecting a poppy plantation. Deaths have been traced to this cause. The dainty heroine who idly plucks to pieces the petals of a flower must beware which blossoms she chooses for the purpose. Lilies, begonias, rhododendrons and peonies are likely to set up fevers.

Miss Jeanne DuBrui.

Handcuffed to a ring bolt on the shelving side of a tiny cell in the "Black Hole" of the English convict ship Success, now anchored at New York, Miss Jeanne DuBrui, an 18-year-old Brooklyn, N. Y., school girl, is attempting an endurance test which no other woman has voluntarily undertaken. Many women died in the cell while confined there under sentence when the Success was a receiving ship for women prisoners outside of Melbourne, Australia. Others went mad or became blind. Miss DuBrui, one of the more than one thousand women who volunteered for the test, is trying to remain in the cell twenty-four hours. Is she succeeds she will win $100 offered by the vessel's commander, Capt. Smith, and will devote the money to a younger brother's education. The convict ship Success, which has been exhibited in all parts of the world, is the oldest vessel afloat having been built in British East India in 1790. She is the last of the dreadful fleet of "Ocean Hells" which carried convicts from England to Australia.

Oh, What a Tangled Web.

I was visiting in the country one summer, and did not bring a wrap. One night it was quite cold, and a friend of mine came to take me for a drive. I was anxious to make a good impression. He insisted that I wear a coat. I said I did not need one. He was so persistent that finally I told him a friend had borrowed my coat. Then he insisted that we go straight after it. So off we started for the girl's home. I ran up the stairs to her room, resolved that if her coat was not in her room I would stay there rather than come down without it. It was there, however, and I took it and ran downstairs. We didn't get out of the yard soon enough for me, for I was afraid some of the family would see us, and there would be an explanation due.—Chicago Tribune.

CITY TO HAVE CREDIT BUREAU

Concern, With Backing of Chamber of Commerce, Will Furnish Reports on Individuals and Make Collections—To Point Out
What Charge Accounts Mean.

A complete and up-to-date Credit Reporting Bureau, covering Kingston and all the surrounding towns and country with headquarters at the Chamber of Commerce, is being organized and is expected to fill a long felt need among the local merchants and is already arousing considerable interest.

The Merchants Credit Co., Inc., of Boston, an organization of specialists in credit reporting work, is to install the system and its representatives are now in town arranging the preliminary incident to the work. The plan is designed to give the merchants a highly specialized system which is similar to that followed by nearly one hundred cities and towns in New England and to which the Merchants Credit Co. is adding new features as rapidly as possible.

A complete card index record will be installed in the Chamber of Commerce and will allow the merchants to obtain information direct, by phone and brings the credit standing of every individual up to the minute at all times. Their plans include a collection department to supplement the reporting work, which is furnished free of charge to the subscribers, and results in other cities have proven that thousands of dollars have been returned to the merchants, with no cost whatever, which had otherwise been entirely lost, it is said.

The Retail Branch of the Chamber of Commerce have endorsed the system and in the preliminary canvass the active and enthusiastic support of many representative business concerns has been secured.

The Boston company announces that it follows a policy of constructive propaganda, rather than destructive criticism, which is a departure from the general idea of conducting a credit bureau. It will conduct its work on the well established fact that by far the greater percentage of the population of every community is not only honest but desires to transact business with tradesmen on business principles. The company has demonstrated to its entire satisfaction that when its people learn that it is running a charge account at a store they are merely borrowing a portion of the merchant's capital for a stipulated period, just as if they were borrowing money from their bankers, they are generally surprised at first, but the logic of it is so plain that a new conception of their obligations to the firms who extend this courtesy and convenience is nearly always the result.

That the Credit Reporting Bureau will start out with the full support of the best business interests of the city is said to be assured, and that the company installing it will exert itself to the utmost to justify the permanent confidence and support of its members is affirmed by its representatives.

THE TWO DOGS.

"Bow-wow," said the little brown and white wire-haired dog to the big police dog, "and what is your name?"
He wagged his tail as he spoke and the big police dog wagged his tail as he answered, "Bow-wow," he said,
my name is Wolf Wolf."

"And mine," said the little brown and white wire-haired dog, "is Michael."

"Glad to meet you Michael," said
Wolf Wolf, wagging his tail again.
"I'm glad to meet you too, Wolf Wolf," said Michael.

"I've heard some very fine things of you," said Wolf Wolf. "I've heard your mistress loves to play tennis and that you are wonderful the way you come and watch the tennis game without ever interrupting it. Do tell me about it. I so much want to know."

"Dear me," said Michael, "I don't do anything that is wonderful. Nothing wonderful in the least."

"Oh yes," said Wolf Wolf, "you are very bright and I would like to hear just what it is you do."

"I've been told you're very smart about it, and I'd like to hear just what it is you do."

"It wouldn't sound well for me to tell it," said Michael, "now that you

"There He Comes."

make it out to be fine. As for my opinion of what I do—I don't think it amounts to so much. I don't think I do anything that is wonderful."

"Then tell me what it is you do and I will decide afterward whether I think it is wonderful or not," said Wolf Wolf.

"Well," said Michael, "I walk outside the chalk lines which mark off
the tennis court where the people play, and my mistress plays most of the time in the summer. If the balls go outside of the court I go after them and then I wait until I hear some one say, 'I'm serving, Michael,' and then I go and drop the ball at the person's feet."

"The person who is serving is the person who wants the ball, you see.
That person must start the ball
across the net, you know."

"I don't think there is anything so smart in that. I keep out of the way when I am not wanted though I sit fairly nearby so I can see what is going on and so I can be of use."

"When my mistress is serving she always takes the time to pat me. She says she loves my soft, nice head!"

"That's what my mistress says and as she is a lovely mistress I'm glad she feels that way about me."

"I really don't think it is wonderful to know the little I know about tennis.
Why my mistress is wonderful. She knows all about it."

"I think it's pretty smart of you,
Michael," said Wolf Wolf, "and I'm not surprised I've heard so much about your cleverness and the way you help at the tennis games."

"Have you seen my master? Well, I'm just as fond of my master as you are of your mistress. I spend my time sitting up and watching him if he's busy."

"The other night I went to a dance with him and sat on the porch and watched him dance. They tell me I'm graceful and they admire my way and tan hair."

"I am glad they do admire me because I want to be admired for my master's sake. He is so proud of me."

"And you know, Michael, though I am so big, I'm nothing but a baby!"

"How I adore being petted. The way I am I will jump up in my master's lap to be loved. I'm a faithful dog!"

"I just adore him! I do whatever he tells me to do and when he tells me he is going off for a little while without me I do not follow him but wait until he comes back again. The way he tells me I can follow, what for there is in my dog head?"

"I am friendly with everyone but my master I adore. At these Michael, there he comes and with an ice cream cone for me. And I believe there is one for you too, Michael. How I do love the cream cones. You'd better think it is time to look at me would you Michael? My mouth waters already."

Not on His Hands.

"Harry—Harry seems to be the promise. Harry? Why so?"

"Harry—Harry is going to whip me
when he comes home."

"Vastation—indeed. What will you give me to take the whipping of your hand?"

"Harry—He ain't got to whip me on my hands."

BASEBALL AND SOLDIER GUESTS

With President Burns back after a week of sickness and two weeks of pitching hay (in the order named) on the old homestead in Delaware county, and 20 ex-service men from the Knauth home as its guests, the Kiwanis Club had a very enjoyable weekly luncheon at the Y. M. C. A. today. Mrs. Helen Stern Mann and Tommy Dolan gave of their time and talent in their usual generous manner to help entertain the former soldier boys and these and the club members liked their songs so well that it was hard for them to get away. Mrs. Brusk, a pianist from Englewood, N. J., aided Miss Richards, the club's regular accompanist, and also played a selection which was applauded.

This second group of ex-service men was welcomed for the club by Sam Stern and one of them in response said that it was evident the club was learning how to do the thing right and that this was the kind of an affair the boys liked to attend.

The baseball team is the center of interest just now, a challenge having been sent to the Poughkeepsie team which beat Newburgh, for a game July 30, at Poughkeepsie. "Therefore it behooves us," says Manager Sam Bernstein, "to get busy, and I want all hands out at Forsyth Park tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock for practice. I suggest that those who have one bring the family along and a basket lunch so there will be something besides hard work about it."

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. B. B. Freer of No. 145 Grand avenue, Hackensack, N. J., announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Margaret Elizabeth Freer, to Dr. Donald Anstyn Curtis of No. 241 Union street, Hackensack, at a dinner given in her honor on July 18. Miss Freer is a charming and popular young woman of that city. DIED.

CONY.—At New York city, Wednesday, July 20, 1921, Patrick Cony, funeral will be held from 174 Broadway, this city, Friday morning at 8 o'clock and at St. Ann's Church, Sawkill, at 9 o'clock, where a Mass of requiem will be offered for the repose of his soul. Interment St. Ann's Cemetery.

In loving memory of Capt. Charles C. Brodhead, whom God hath called to rest four years ago today, July 21, 1917.

When a daddy breathes his last farewell.

The blow is more than tongue can tell.

Earth seems quite another place.

Without the smile of a daddy's face.

Sleep on, dear father, and take your rest.

For God hath called when He thought best.

Our loss means pain, but yours meant gain.

In heaven we hope to meet again.

WIFE AND FAMILY.

Dedicated to the memory of Corporal Martin J. McHugh, of Co. B, 307th Infantry, who departed this life July 21, 1918.

Short are the days and yet how long.

Since you, our darling lad,

Left us all to fight the cause.

In khaki you were clad.

You faced the battle bravely.

In your heart there was no fear.

For you loved the flag you fought for.

And the colors you held dear.

We miss you and we long for your return again.

Thou art, we know that on this earth it never more will be.

But the light of hope will ever guide the way, dear.

And join us once again in life eternally.

Gasol Skids Again.

While Meyer Gasol, the Main street tailor, was driving his automobile touring car along Broadway Wednesday evening he met with another accident. The car skidded while near the corner of Elmendorf street and the car ran up on the sidewalk, striking a tree and then running back into the street. One wheel was smashed and the car otherwise damaged. The ambulance from "Doc" Smith's garage on Clinton avenue was summoned and the car was taken to the garage for repairs. None of the occupants of the car were injured.

Bought Some Oil Stock.

Oscar Tshirky, says the New York American, is among those who bought worthless oil stock from Theophilus Freer, who was on Wednesday sentenced in New York to a term in Sing Sing prison. Oscar is said to have lost $3,000 through his investment.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

The funeral of Private F. G. Mager was held from his home, 129 Hunter street, at 9 o'clock this morning and at 9:30 from St. Mary's Church, where a requiem Mass for the repose of his soul was celebrated by the Rev. John J. Hickey. The bearers were Charles Westphall, James Duncan, John Look, Joseph Diamond, Michael Lawless and John Hogan. The Rev. Joseph Mannix accompanied the remains to the cemetery, where taps were blown and a volley fired by the firing squad.

Maria, wife of the late John D. Winfield, formerly of this city, where at one time he managed the Hotel Brunswick on Wall street, now the Advance building, opposite the court house, and was county superintendent of the poor in 1892-94, died in New York city Tuesday, July 19, in the 82nd year of her age. The funeral will be held from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. F. J. Falk, 1382 Plimpton avenue, the Bronx, Thursday evening, July 21, at 8:30 o'clock. The interment will be in the Whitfield Cemetery, town of Rochester, on Friday morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Conrad Keim, who had been sick for a long time, died at her home on Partition street, Saugerties Tuesday evening, July 19, in her 75th year of her age. Mrs. Keim is survived by six daughters, Mrs. Carl Faber, Mrs. George Yake, Mrs. George Johnson, Mrs. George Child, Mrs. Julia Canet and Miss Minnie Keim, and three sons Grover, Frank and George Keim. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Henry C. Egnor officiating. Mrs. Keim had been a resident of Saugerties many years and was an estimable woman, highly respected by neighbors and friends.

Patrick Canty died at his home, No. 74 West 94th street, New York city, Wednesday morning after a short illness. Mr. Canty was born in Ireland and lived there until about fourteen years ago when he moved to New York city, and had led a retired life for the past six years. He is survived by his wife, four sons, Michael, John, Jerome, William and Edward Canty, and two daughters, Eleanor and Mrs. Augustus Robert, two brothers, James of Hancock and William of this city, two sisters, Eliza and Mrs. Mary Plunkett of this city. The remains arrived here this afternoon and the funeral will be held Friday morning from No. 174 Broadway at 8 o'clock and at 9 o'clock at St. Ann's Church Sawkill, where a requiem Mass will be offered for the repose of his soul. Interment in St. Ann's cemetery.

The funeral of Florence Garrity, daughter of the late Daniel and Katherine Gallagher Garrity, who died Monday morning, was held from the late residence, No. 226 Wall street, this morning at 9:30 o'clock and at St. Joseph's Church at 10 o'clock, where a solemn Mass of requiem was celebrated for the repose of her soul by the Rev. M. P. O'Garra, as celebrant, the Rev. Charles McCabe as deacon, and the Rev. Henry Fitzgerald as sub-deacon. The many relatives and friends left to mourn the sad death of Miss Garrity gathered at the church to pay their last tribute of respect to her memory. The beautiful floral offerings, bespoke the kindly respect in which deceased was held. The following young ladies, former school chums, marched as an escort from the home to the church and also accompanied their dear friend's body to its last resting place: Beatrice Follette, Dorothy Cunningham, Mary Birmingham, Genevieve Birmingham, Beatrice, Brethaupt, Eva McGraw, Gertrude Lane and Beatrice Rae. St. Joseph's choir was augmented by a number of her young school girl friends, who at the conclusion of the Mass rendered very feelingly, "A message from the Sacred Heart." The bearers also class-mates of deceased were James Byrne, Leonon O'Reilly, Walter Robinson, James Cassidy, Edward Brown and John Johnson. The Rev. Father O'Garra, accompanied the remains to St. Mary's cemetery, where the committal services were held.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 21.—The stock market opened generally heavy this morning although there was firmness in spots. Mexican Petroleum was down ¼ to 102½. Atlantic Gulf unchanged at 21½. Bethlehem Steel "B" was down ¼ at 46½. Republic Steel was off ¾ at 44½. General Asphalt declined ½ to 49½. U. S. Rubber was up ¾ at 51½. Crucible Steel was down ¾ at 54½. Baldwin rose ¼ to 75½. Studebaker was unchanged at 79½. Tobacco Products was up ¾ at 56.

The feature of the market during the forenoon was the continued indifference to important developments. This was shown not only in the lack of response to the reduction in the federal reserve discount rate but also in the manner in which Republic Steel held steady in the face of the bad quarterly reports. Mexican Petroleum was again in supply falling over two points to 101½ and Pan-American broke over two points to 46½. The leather issues were somewhat active, American Hide and Leather preferred moving up ¾ to 52½.

Republic Steel recovered to 45 and U. S. Steel rallied from 72½ to 72½. Mexican Petroleum reacted to 101 followed by an upturn to 102½, and Pan-American recovered nearly 1 point to 47½. Studebaker recovered fractionally to 78½. The railroad stocks showed a better tone, Southern Pacific advancing 1 point to 76½.

The market closed steady today; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

GREEK TARTAR PREACHES NEW GOSPEL OF HEALTH

Says Man Has Three Personalities, Seeks Fourth to Control the Other Three.

Constantinople.—A new gospel of health—that man is not one, but three, and that he cannot function fully until his three personalities are in harmony—has come here from the middle East on the tide of Russian and other refugees from far countries.

This gospel is proclaimed by a small, dark man of mystery, a Greek Tartar, G. I. Gurdjieff. He has contributed to the meager intellectual life of the city a new throbb.

The outward and primary form of his teachings begins with dances borrowed from the Mosques of Persia and the temples of India. He puts some of his patients on bread and water for months at a time but requires them, all the while, to carry on the most violent exercises which conform to the music of a piano.

Gurdjieff's teachings have some similarity with the ancient Greek conceptions of the development of mental force and bodily grace and activity.

He is persuaded that his teachings will change the art of living. He has gathered about him a group of converts who say they are going to spread his theories westward, some going to the United States. He says he was taught by Russian physicians and psychologists.

"In harmony there is health," declared Gurdjieff. "The western world of medicine and psychology has never grasped the truth that man is not controlled by one personality, but by three, and when these three are not in harmony a man says he is 'sick.' A sick man, a man with that tired feeling, is like a horse and carriage without a driver. The man is not master of himself."

"Civilization has led man away from himself, physically and spiritually. Too much use of the head has dehumanized him. Man is composed of three parts, just like a machine. One part thinks, one feels and one acts and sleeps. If man thinks too much, or acts too much, or sleeps too much, he falls ill."

"My plan is to first put the three back into a common unity, and then gradually develop a fourth personality which controls the other three. If this fourth personality, or dominating consciousness, is not developed, the three men in the same body never establish contact with each other, and the anarchy we call sickness destroys him."

START DREDGING
CREEK MONDAY

The government will start the work of dredging the mouth of the Rondout creek on Monday, and it is expected that the work will be carried on up the creek to a point near the gas house in Ponckhockie. The government has control over the waters of the creek from the mouth to that point. Rivermen say that the creek needs dredging for almost its navigable length. At the mouth of the creek a bad bar has formed by the sand and dirt being carried down from the upper waters.

ADVENTURERS QUIT SHIP,
HOMESICKNESS IS CAUSE

Keen to Sail on Tour of the World, but Americans Soon Get Enough of It.

Pagapago, American Samoa.—Homesickness and the hard rule of the quarterdeck caused 13 Americans, who wanted to tour the world seeking adventure, to leave the yacht Wisdom II by the time she reached here recently from Los Angeles, Cal., on a trip of scientific research round the globe.

"All America wanted to go," said Frederick O'Brien, author, one of the ship's company, in telling of the requests made before sailing for berths on the boat. There were 20 officers, sailors and moving-picture men aboard when the vessel left California.

Six left at Tahiti and seven here, leaving what Mr. O'Brien called a workable crew of seven Americans. Six Tahitians were taken aboard as sailors.

The Wisdom, commanded by Capt. Edward S. Salisbury of New York and California, arrived here April 11. She left Los Angeles January 19. On arriving here Captain Salisbury entered the naval hospital for a few days.

The Marquesas Islands and points in Tahiti, Bora Bora and Hahane were visited before the boat arrived here. When she left for Apia, all Pagapago went to the beach to bid her farewell.

O'Brien and Dr. Malcolm Douglas, New York, another of the ship's company, plan to leave the boat for a time, they said here, and visit the unique valley of Malaita in American Samoa. This place is known by the natives as the "haunted valley."

Seidman visited places like the New Hebrides, New Guinea and New Caledonia are to be visited by the Wisdom before she heads for the Far East and India.

Flag day, the twenty-first anniversary of the hoisting of the American flag in Samoa, was celebrated here April 18, 1921, with dancing contests, races, a tug-of-war, copra outing contests, a band concert, naval parade and addresses by American officials and native chiefs.

Chief Satele, a native leader, urged his followers to do all they could for the administration.

"It is a pleasure," he said, "that we are united here today and are able to again celebrate the anniversary of the flag flying above us."

Hearing, Sight and Speech Restored by Operation on Brain.

Deaf, dumb, blind and paralyzed in every limb, so helpless that it was necessary to feed him by means of a tube through his nostrils, unable to feel, smell or taste or even to think, Luther Dionne was carried into the county hospital at Denver nearly eight years ago. Today he can hear, see, smell, taste, feel, and in limited fashion, he can talk. His right side remains partially paralyzed.

Dionne's brain was operated on. Slowly the powers of life were redeveloped. Came the day when he could move one finger, then a whole hand. One day, he spoke.

As yet Dionne's speech is confined to a whispered "yes" or "no," but he can make himself understood.

BOY

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SOME LIVE EAGLES

Troop 15 of Buffalo has passed its ten-year mark and still "going stronger." One of the most interesting features of its organization is its Eagle Life patrol, into which regular troop members graduate on reaching the age of seventeen or on going away to college. These Eagle Life members meet quarterly and have their own officers, organization and constitution, but they also meet with the troop and participate, at least three times a year, in a common program. Troop 15 has several "big ideas." One of these is contained in its slogan, "college for all." At present the troop has 12 boys in college, nine of whom declare that they would not have gone to college if it had not been for the influence of Troop 15. Scholarships amounting to several thousand dollars have been secured through the Eagle scholarship bureau.

Other Eagle departments are a vocational bureau, now in its seventh year, which has filled a real need and been remarkably successful, a travel bureau, which keeps records of journeys, with pictures and data, for the benefit of Eagles or their relatives traveling and the Eagle Troop development, established in 1917, which works through the individual Eagle keeping him active and interested in scouting. Some of the results of this service are: One Eagle a scoutmaster, three Eagles (two of them members of the American Legion) all assistant scoutmasters of Troop 15, five Eagles, assistant scoutmasters in their respective college town, and another, an assistant scoutmaster in the city in which he works.

An extension educational scheme is also another bright idea of the enterprising Eagles, a plan which looks to the encouragement of every Eagle to continue to study after graduation, and in general to enlarge his vision and keep his standards high. Certain annual honors are awarded the Eagles at their June meeting. For instance, the Eagle Feather is awarded the Eagle who has done the most worthwhile work in literature during the year. The Eagle Heart is awarded that Eagle who has done the most during the year to aid in growth and progress of Troop 15. The White Eagle is awarded the Eagle who, out in the world, best upholds the ideals of Troop 15 and the Boy Scouts of America generally for service.

WHAT SCOUTS ARE DOING.

In Kansas City boy scouts annually participate in the sanitary survey of the city conducted under the auspices of the Health department. Over 500 scouts turned out last spring for this service which included a census of fire hazards and health menaces throughout the entire city. Similar service is being rendered in many other cities by scouts.

Among other things, Erie, Pa., scouts last year built bird houses, conducted a Learn-to-Swim campaign, contributed to the Marine Memorial, aided in Salvation Army and Community Chest drive, acted as aides at Rotary Club convention, decorated soldier's graves, co-operated with the state game warden in planting walnut trees and distributed invitations to foreigners to attend Americanization classes.

Troop 1 of Florence, Alabama, took school census, aided chamber of commerce in checking up Federal census, and instructed 2,500 people in the use and location of the fire alarm boxes.

Scouts of Bucyrus, Ohio, made an efficient collection of outstanding library books for the public library, conducted a clean-up in an old cemetery, acted as guides and messengers for over 400 delegates at the State Young People's conference.

Boy Scouts of Riverside, Cal., took a tree census, reporting not only number but species and location of each. For five years past they have guarded and patrolled the trails leading to the summit of Rattlesnake Mountain, on the occasion of the Easter sunrise service.

SCOUTS BUILD MOTOR TRUCK.

A scout is ingenious. If anybody doubts it, let him look at the motor truck which some thrifty boy scouts out in Maxwell, Iowa, have recently built out of junked automobiles, with the addition of a damaged stationary engine which they got at a bargain. The car makes only ten miles an hour but it can and does carry a big load of boys and their duffel when they wish to convey themselves to camp or elsewhere. The hand-built car recently made the trip to the state fair with its owners where it aroused much interest.

NEWS OF SCOUTS.

Scouts of Lawton, Okla., are not only going quite extensively into the tree nursery business but are also supplying crabs, snails and asparagus roots from their own gardens.

The scoutmaster of Troop 1, Helmetta, N. J., recently wrote and staged a successful play designed to demonstrate the value of scout training. The entertainment had excellent results in interesting the public and recruiting new scouts.

SHERIFF TAMED TEXAS BAD MAN

"Getter" of Desperadoes When
State Was Wild and Woolly.

NO FEAR IN HIS MAKEUP

A. J. Spradley, for 25 years Sheriff of Nacogdoches County, Central Figure in Many Exciting Incidents—Days When Men Were Shot Down in Streets Without the Slightest Provocation—Spradley Tells of His Early Experiences.

West Texas in its palmy days of gun play had "a good and plenty" of bad men and a full quota of those fearless and pioneer peace officers pledged to keep these killers down. All this is known and admitted. But he who would get the record straight must not overlook the fact that in the '70s and early '80s east Texas was also a rather wild and woolly region itself, with its own troubles and its own remedies for these troubles, writes Elmer Summers in the Galveston News.

To the easterner of the old days all Texas was the west. To Texans themselves, however, a certain line of demarcation was evident. The country lying between Fort Worth and the border of Louisiana was much more thickly settled and much more "civilized," in a certain meaning of that term than was that vast stretch of territory reaching out to the New Mexico line and including the Panhandle. Comparatively speaking, of course, the west Texas of those days really was wilder and more primitive than was east Texas. But to the tenderfoot the difference did not present a quite wide enough margin to admit of the making of much distinction. And the tenderfoot's viewpoint is the viewpoint of most of us living in this day and time. We are all rather effete as compared with the pioneers of the frontier and the tenderfoot's analysis of the situation must stand.

Tamer of Desperadoes. This, then, is a study of certain goings on in Nacogdoches county, east Texas, a story of some desperadoes and near desperadoes and a story of the man who tamed them.

A. J. (John) Spradley of Nacogdoches, the central figure of this story, was for twenty-five years (intermittently) the sheriff of Nacogdoches county. Born in the year 1855 in Simpson county, Mississippi, he came to Texas at the age of 19. He came alone. His parents, six brothers and three sisters, remained behind in Mississippi for a year or so longer, until they, too, finally followed John Spradley's example and emigrated to Nacogdoches county.

John Spradley meanwhile had gone out to west Texas. There he lived for two years, and perhaps it was in that adventurous atmosphere that he learned some of the lessons that later stood him in such good stead as an enforcer of law and order in Nacogdoches county.

Lively Days in Nacogdoches.

It was in the days of '82 that Spradley first came into the limelight. He was at that time a young farmer living in the country, paying only an occasional visit to Nacogdoches. In those days Nacogdoches was a sort of crossroads between the northern and eastern states and the western portions of Texas and Mexico. That being the case, naturally many desperate characters were attracted to the town, and Nacogdoches had a name. It is said, far and wide for being a town in which "men died with their boots on." At that time there were only fifteen saloons in Nacogdoches county, ten of which were in Nacogdoches. There was much drunkenness, and the officials who took care of the situation had to be brave, fearless men.

In 1882 John Orton, then sheriff of Nacogdoches county, was having great trouble keeping order in Nacogdoches. He employed dozens of assistants or deputies to help him keep order, but to no avail. Men were shot down in the streets on the least provocation. Orton about that time came to know John Spradley, and he asked him to become his deputy. Spradley consented.

Joined Populist Party.

A short time after this Orton resigned his office as sheriff and Spradley took possession of it by appointment. Spradley then held the sheriff's office in Nacogdoches county for ten years. In the '90s the Democrats and Populists were having their contest in Texas. The feeling in Nacogdoches, as in other places, ran very high. John Spradley, Democrat, became a member of the Populist party. He made a race for sheriff on the Populist ticket against his brother, Matt Spradley, who was running on the Democratic ticket. The result of the election which followed was the defeat of A. J. Spradley. Matt Spradley, the brother, held the office one term, and A. J. Spradley ran against him once more on the Populist ticket, coming elected by a handsome vote. He held the sheriff's office until 1900, when a man by the name of W. J. Campbell ran against him, defeating him. Campbell held the office one term, and Spradley defeated him. Then, in 1910, W. C. Rich ran for sheriff against Spradley and defeated him. Spradley resigned his post in the next election. In all Spradley has been sheriff of Nacogdoches about twenty-five years, with intervals during which he either was or served as sheriff, sometimes holding the office.

Spradley's Early Experiences.

In relating some of his early experiences as a peace officer, Spradley said: "When peace was in the Nacogdoches county in the days of the '70s, a merchant out there, was murdered one night while in his store, the man's neck being cut from ear to ear. Every one in the Nacogdoches community thought that the perpetrator of the crime was a negro, and promptly every negro in the entire country about Nacogdoches was put under arrest. I went out to the scene of the killing. After making a close examination of everything, I asked if it were a certain fact that they had all the negroes in the community under arrest. My question was answered in the affirmative. I then ordered them to bring me one negro at a time to a certain place near by—it was dark—and I would proceed to question the suspect. When I was convinced that the questioned party was innocent I would fire a shot from my pistol, take a sheet, place it over the negro after forcing him to lie down, and then call for another negro. This procedure was followed for some time until finally a negro boy was brought out. I showed him the 'dead one' and gave him fair warning. He straightway confessed to having seen another negro pull off a bloody shirt. This was all I wanted. The arrest was soon made and the negro was hanged shortly afterward."

Joel Goodwin Case.

Another very famous case in which Spradley played a dramatic part was the Joel Goodwin case. The following are the circumstances:

"Goodwin," Mr. Spradley said, "was a man with a criminal record living in Logansport, La. At the time he committed the offense, he was the owner of a saloon in Logansport. He had hired as a bartender a man by the name of Collins. Later, Collins decided to put up a saloon of his own. Goodwin warned him if he did he would kill him. Collins, notwithstanding, put up his saloon, and Goodwin, as he said he would do, promptly shot Collins to death. Goodwin made good his 'escape' from Logansport to the country and no one could find him. I had then, as I have now, a fine bunch of bloodhounds, and I decided to try my hand at catching him. I was not then an official, I went with my dogs to Logansport, but on account of many things it looked as if I would fail with them. I finally asked for some of Goodwin's underwear. This was given to me. I took the underwear out to the woods where Goodwin was supposed to be hiding, and let my dogs get the scent from the clothes. After they did this they lost no time in getting on the trail of the offender. They gave the man such hot chase that he finally came back to town and gave himself up. He stood trial and came clear."

"But the man was angry at me. He declared that I had done him wrong; that some day he was going to kill me. A few months afterward, when I was sheriff, I was called to Louisiana to investigate a postoffice robbery. Goodwin, who was still living in Logansport, heard that I had passed through there in the direction of Shreveport, and he declared he would kill me on the train upon my return. I was notified of the plans by wire. Goodwin was at the depot to meet the train that was bearing me homeward on my return trip. He had his wife and two sons with him.

Mail Clerk Shot.

"They were heavily armed with rifles and shotguns. When the train pulled up at the station Goodwin mistook the mail clerk for me and fired a full charge of buckshot into the shoulder of the poor fellow. I then came to the window of the car in which I was riding and peered out. Goodwin saw me and leveled his gun. I was too quick for him, however. I fired and Goodwin fell dead with a bullet in his forehead. His wife made a desperate lunge at me, attempting to shoot me with her revolver. She stumbled and fell and about that time the train started out of the station, carrying me away from the mob. Nothing was ever done with me for this shooting, the district attorney, of that county afterward saying that he 'would if he could raise $1,000 for me.' Goodwin was a man every one feared."

Such stories as the preceding are only two of the many that Mr. Spradley can tell to an interested listener. But a man of Mr. Spradley's type cannot long travel the road he traveled without mishap or misfortune. He has had some narrow escapes, having been seriously shot several times by desperate men.

SOVIET BANS FAIRY STORIES

King and Princess Must Be Described as "Oppressors of Masses."

All religious or mythological subjects are banned from a competition for the best short story written for Russian children which has been organized by the Moscow soviet commissariat for education, says a dispatch. Additional conditions for competition as published by the soviet newspapers are that the children's tales must be devoid of all elements of superstition, and must contain no mention of angels, fairies and evil geniuses. Kings and princesses must be described as oppressors of the masses, "such as they are in reality."

As suitable subjects are suggested the future of mankind, the science of science, technical skill and industry, while tales describing the life of the working masses will be especially welcome.

Simple Wet Battery.

Perhaps the most simple wet cell which can be made, says Experiment- al Science (Washington), is from a copper wire previously heated in a blue gas flame, and a silver wire, both held in running tap water. The copper wire in the case shown becomes coated with a film of copper oxide. A varied effect can be produced by substituting the copper and silver wires by holding paper and wrapping them with the same material and then pouring one of the common electrolytes upon the whole.

Salt water or sulphuric acid can be used.

COLONIALS 5;
TWIN CITIES 3

With a rally in the seventh and eighth stanzas the Colonial A. C. spurred to the front in the game with the Twin Cities of Ponda at the Athletic Field on Wednesday afternoon winning the game by a score of 5 to 3. Each team scored in the opening inning, the visitors getting two tallies and the locals one, and again in the seventh the visitors scored a run, while the Colonials tied the score by putting two across the platter, and won the game by scoring two more in the eighth. Bill McAuliffe pitched for the locals and twirled excellent ball. The score:

AT THE THEATRES.

"Heliotrope" At Keene's—"Rookie's Return" At Auditorium.

Would you give your life to insure your daughter's happiness? That is the question put bluntly up to an ex-convict in "Heliotrope," the picture attraction at Keene's for three days starting today. "Heliotrope" is a picture that is "different," no mawkish sentiment, no undue emphasis on sex love, no world problem solved—just a big appealing theme unfolded. Johnny Hines in "Torchy's Double Triumph" is the comedy attraction.

Hailed as a companion picture to the famous "Twenty-three and a Half Hours Leave," "The Rookie's Return" Douglas McLean's latest picture will be featured at the Auditorium tonight. It is a story of a young veteran's return to civilian life and his struggles with the horrors of demobilization and peace. Art Accord in the thrilling western chapter play "The White Horseman," also a Sunshine comedy "The Baby" are added features. Friday Gloria Swanson in "The Triple Clue."

ATWOOD.

The Guillotine.
The guillotine was named after Dr. Joseph Guillotin, on whose suggestion it was introduced into France during the revolution in 1793. The instrument consists of two upright posts, with a crossbeam at the top, the posts being so grooved as to allow the falling of a heavy steel knife, with a slanting edge, upon the neck of the victim, as soon as the pest holding it in place is released by the executioner.

COLONIALS 5;
TWIN CITIES 3

With a rally in the seventh and eighth stanzas the Colonial A. C. started to the front in the game with the Twin Cities of Fond du Lac at the Athletic Field on Wednesday afternoon winning the game by a score of 5 to 3. Each team scored in the opening innings, the visitors getting two hits and the locals one, and again in the seventh the visitors scored a run, while the Colonials tied the score by putting two across the platter, and won the game by scoring two more in the eighth. Bill McAuliffe pitched for the locals and twirled excellent ball. The score:

AT THE THEATRES.

"Heliotrope" At Keene's—"Rookie's Return" At Auditorium.

Would you give your life to insure your daughter's happiness? That is the question put bluntly up to an ex-convict in "Heliotrope," the picture attraction at Keene's for three days starting today. "Heliotrope" is a picture that is "different," no mawkish sentiment, no undue emphasis on sex love, no world problem solved—just a big, appealing theme unfolded. Johnny Hines in "Torchy's Double Triumph" is the comedy attraction. Hailed as a companion picture to the famous "Twenty-three and a Half Hours Leave," "The Rookie's Return," Douglas McLean's latest picture will be featured at the Auditorium tonight. It is a story of a young veteran's return to civilian life and his struggles with the horrors of demobilization and peace. Art Accord in the thrilling western chapter play "The White Horseman," also a Sunshine comedy "The Baby" are added features. Friday Gloria Swanson in "The Triple Glue."

ATWOOD.

Atwood, July 20.—There will be an ice cream social held on the grounds of the Atwood school house Saturday evening, July 23. The pastor is also planning on having a community sing. All come and help make it a success.

RIFTON.

Rifton, July 21.—There will be service at St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, Rifton, the Rev. James G. Cameron in charge, every Sunday during the summer at 1 p. m. Sunday school at 2:30 p. m.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Esther Thomas, wife of the late Private Frank Thomas, hereby expresses her gratitude to her friends, Company M and members of the American Legion, for their kindness and sympathy in her bereavement and also to neighbors for displaying flags—Advertisement.
